THE RECORDS OF THE HONORABLE SOCIETY OF LINCOLN'S INN.

THE BLACK BOOKS

VOL. I.

FROM A.D. 1422 TO A.D. 1586.

LINCOLN'S INN.

PREFACE.

THIS Volume of the series of The Records of Lincoln's Inn, deals with the contents (from 1422, 1 Hen. VI. to 1586, 29th Eliz.), of the first five manuscript volumes known as The Black Books. The entries from which the admissions to the Society can be collected, have already been extracted, and together with the entries in the "Kalendar" ordered in 1574 to be "made of those which hereafter shall be admitted in this house," and the entries in a subsequent series continuing to the present time form the main part of the preceding volumes of the Records.

Besides the admissions, the Black Books contain entries of the most varied character; the names of those yearly filling the different offices of the Society; the names, after 1518, of those called by the Society to its Bench and Bar; the minutes of the governing body; the yearly accounts of the two great Officers of the Society, the Pensioner and the Treasurer; the accounts of members to whom the special superintendence of some building or other work had been entrusted; narrations of public events such as (in this volume) the mischance of Sir Robert Bowes, Knight, and "felowe p. 262 of this Hous," the "Sedigge of Bollan" (Boulogne) by Hen.VIII., the death of p. 266 Hen. VIII., the "Honorable Sergeauntes feaste at Lincolnes Ynne," and the p.276-84 coronation of Edw. VI.; the regulations for the admission, education, maintenance and conduct of the members of the fellowship; and the names of those who incurred the displeasure of the governing body, the nature of their offences, and the punishments awarded in respect of them.

It has been difficult to do justice to such a medley. It would have been easy to print the whole verbatim, but the expense would have been great and the text wearisome to read. Yet it is difficult to condense and omit without risk of losing a passing mention, which viewed in connection with other entries, would throw light on the history of the Inn. The general rule adopted has been to omit nothing which could from any point of view be serviceable and to lean rather to inclusion than omission. In this view the text of the first two Black Books, that is, down to the year 1506, has been set out substantially at length, the omissions consisting mainly of small items of account of no possible present interest. From the year 1506 are given the words of all important resolutions and a summary of the less important entries, the items of the yearly accounts which are worthy of note, and from time to time a specimen of yearly account in full. The mere omission therefore after 1506 of an item of account which previous to that date often recurred does not of itself imply that the item no longer recurs in the text: the mind of the reader who has read pp. 1-140 has been left to supply the omission; and notice is given when a detail disappears from its accustomed place in the original text.

In short an attempt has been made to produce a volume which shall present faithfully the contents of the Black Books and yet not be wearisome from prolixity or re-iteration.

LINCOLN'S INN.

The early entries in the "Liber Hospicii de Lincolsin" shew that in 1422 the Society were in occupation of a site known as Lincoln's Inn. This was made up of two properties; one which may be broadly described as the southern portion, was the property of the See of Chichester: the other, the northern portion, belonged to the Hospital of Burton Lazars of Jerusalem in England, whose Master was also Prior of St. Giles' Hospital without London. Both properties were bounded on the east by "Chancelare" Lane and ran conterminously to the westward: the discussion of the dividing line and of the sites of the buildings must be left to the concluding volume of this series. The Bishop's Estate was leased to the Society in 1422 at a yearly rent of 10 marks, reduced by Bishop Arundel to 8 marks, and raised again to 10 marks on that prelate's death. From the notices in this volume, it appears that on the southern edge of this estate were houses with back doors opening on to gardens which abutted on Ficketsfield: there were other buildings on the property, some houses used as chambers, a Hall with a kitchen and buttery, and a chapel. In 1537 Bishop Sampson sold the land held of the See to William and Eustace Sulyard from whom it descended to Edward Sulyard. This gentleman sold his estate to the Society in 1580 for £520. A minute of November 11th, 1580, recites the purchase and sets out a special grant to Edward Sulyard and his heirs male, (being Fellows of the Society) of the chamber, garret, and studies then occupied by Edward Sulyard.

The Burton Lazars' property consisted of a garden known as the long garden of the Inn or Cotterel's which abutted on Chancery Lane, and a coney garth known also as the Backside. A long ditch on the west bounded the coney garth and possibly the whole site. This property was under lease to the Society in 1466 at 9s. a year, the Society underletting the garden to their cook at 13s. 4d. a year. The coney garth contained rabbits which were a temptation to the young gentlemen of the Inn. It was forbidden to kill the coneys and to carry a bow bent or to shoot arrows in the coney garth. In 1546 the introduction of gunpowder is marked by the order that the Company "should do no more shute in gonnys" in the precincts of the Inn.

In the course of years the appearance of the coney garth became changed. Clay for many thousand bricks had been dug out of it for the new buildings of the Society; walks had been laid out, including possibly the present high walk, and trees planted. As the plot became more like the garden, which it was afterwards called, liberty was given to every man to kill the coneys, a license which probably caused their rapid disappearance.

Of the Buildings occupied by the Society, the chapel is dealt with on p. xvii; the references to the Hall and Chambers may well be collected here.

The Hall was the social centre of the Society, containing the only fire to which the majority of the students had access: as chambers with a fire place or chimney (cum chamino) are specially mentioned and were evidently the exception. The Bishop's Hall at first sufficed for the Society. Access to it was by a stair leading to a porch: a glass window in 1454 was fixed in the east end at the expense of Bathe. The only furniture mentioned is the Bench with "lyms and fote trees" and the yeoman's table with its "forme." This hall was pulled down and rebuilt about 1489. On the roof of the new hall was a louvre with glass windows and a gilded vane. Inside the hall was whitewashed: there was a wooden portal, and two wooden screens stood in front of the doors: over that at the nether end of the hall was erected in 1565 a "strong and fair gallery for the surplusage of the Company." It was probably on this screen that the notice about chambers was ordered to be set in 1574. At the same date there were four dormant or fixed tables and four other tables, i.e., tables of boards on trestles. The Bench table was long enough to require a table cloth of 6 to 6½ ells, while a cloth of 5½ ells was sufficient for the other tables. Towells (napkins) were provided for the Benchers. On or near the Bench table stood two great candlesticks. The "Benche" was in the upper part of the Hall and the forms for the rest of the Company in the lower part: the "Barr" probably fixed below the "Benche." Somewhere in the hall stood a cupboard from near which the orders of the Bench were "openly promulged," and a fire or fireplace. "Pentaces" were fixed to several of the windows. Adjoining the Hall were the buttery and kitchen: the inventory of the cook's utensils in 1512, and that of the napery in the buttery in 1569 are interesting.

In 1422 there were buildings used as chambers, and from time to time sets of chambers were built, some on the site of the old buildings. References to the entries about these and the building accounts will be found in the Index. The earlier buildings were two-storied and apparently built of timber and plaster or dawb: the accounts shewing the cost of erecting the buildings contain a curious charge for the purchase "of gloves for the carpenters."

The chambers for the most part were long rooms, inside of which a cell or cells were constructed by panelling*: these cells called "studies" were the subject of frequent orders by the Bench. The floor space outside the studies was probably shared in common by the inhabitants of each chamber and partly occupied by bedding. The Bench lay down that in chambers the junior is to give place to the senior: and on one occasion adjust a dispute about the title to some bedding in the chamber.

Each house of chambers was distinguished by a name such as Le Horsemill, The Dovehouse (of which more below), or by references to the occupants or sites of other chambers. Apparently the convenience of denoting numbers had not yet suggested itself up to the date of the close of this volume.

A Library was in being at a very early date. In 1475, 30s. is recorded as being paid by order of the Governors to Roger Towneshend for the Library.† In 1505, John Nethersole "late of the Society" left 40 marks that the Society might build or newly erect the library within the Inn. Preparations were at once begun for building a new library, and in the accounts for 1508-9 Walsh le Dawber is paid 54s. for (inter alia) the "Seeling librarie" which was situate on the first floor of the new building. Nethersole's bequest was recorded by a "table" or in modern language a tablet, and the stock of books seems to have gone on increasing by gift, purchase or bequest. The books appear to have been freely lent, but access for reading reserved to a few of whom the Reader for the time being was one. The Butler in 1566, wrote a catalogue of the books, which has not been preserved; but several of the books presented from time to time have recently been identified and may be seen in the present Library of the Inn.

The entries in the Black Books do not shew how the Society came by its title, nor how, if it were once of the Inn of Lincoln or of the Earl of Lincoln, it came into occupation of these premises, nor how nor when the name of Lincoln's Inn attached to property belonging to the See of Chichester and St. Giles' Hospital. The discussion of these questions, involving the consideration of evidence outside the Black Books, must be reserved for the final volume of this series. But the text does incidentally fix a date earlier than which the Society cannot have come into occupation.

† The first mention in the Inner Temple records of a Library is under the date of 1506. It is stated that neither the Middle Temple nor Gray's Inn possessed a Library before that date.
A recital in a statute passed by the Society in the year 1466 states that "S. Richard formerly Bishop of Chichester was late dwelling in this house of Lincoln's Inn and the true possessor thereof in right of his Church of Chichester." This Bishop held his See from 1245 to 1253: and the occupation cannot therefore have begun so early as the first date though it may have begun before the second.

THE SOCIETY.
The Society was made up of Socii (rendered, when the minutes came to be written in English, by fellows of the fellowship). At the head of the fellowship stood the Masters of the Bench with an executive of Governors and Officers. The functions of these are discussed below in detail. It is sufficient here to note that the Governors and most of the Officers were chosen by the Bench from their own body, the remainder coming from the members below the Bench, but elected by the Masters of the Bench.
Service, when elected, was obligatory and refusal to serve or default in service was punished by a fine. Attached to the Benchers were the Associates of the Bench without a voice in the government of the Inn.

Next to the Bench came the Utter Barristers, those who had been called by the Bench to the Bar of the Society, and last of all, the Clerks, whose position corresponds to some extent with that of the Law Student of the present day. Besides the Utter Barristers and Clerks, most of whom were engaged in practising or learning their profession, there were a number of Honorary Fellows who had no connection with the practice of the Law and who had been admitted for the most part with a view either to gain or to favours to come to the Society.

Bench, Bar and Clerks were all Socii, fellows of the fellowship, and each of them on admission to the Society as Clerk had taken an oath of obedience and found sureties for the payment of the dues of the Inn.
Every person admitted as a fellow, i.e., all honorary fellows, also on admission had to take the like oath and find sureties.

BENCHERS.
The Benchers from the earliest date were the governing body of the Society. Their name was derived from the Bench on which they sat in the Hall. Stoteville from his accounts for the year 1456-7 appears to have repaired a pre-existing Bench. He therein craves to be allowed 11d. for "pynning of the Bench" by two men for one day, for "lyms" for the same 4d., and for two men for one day, "for hewing of the fote trees for the Bench, 10d." The "high Benche in the Hall" is again mended at a cost of 13d. in 1556-7.

The term "Bencher" appears for the first time in a minute of 1441-2. pp. 189, They style themselves Fellows, or Masters of the Bench, and are described 208, 89 by the Minute Clerk as "My Masters of the Bench," or "of the Company," Venerabiles or Worshipfuls of the Bench.

p. 42 They were called "from the Bar of the Inn to the Bench and admitted." At a Solemn Council held in Trinity Term, 1494, it was ordained that for the future no one should be admitted to the Bench except in full term, and by the advice and discretion of the Governors for the time being and of all other Benchers then being in the Inn. This rule, probably confirmatory of the old practice, is still observed.

The actual Call to the Bench took place apparently in the Hall, as did the Call to the Bar, and was made after 1563 by the "most ancient, being a Reader, who is present on call night." There is no mention of any sum being paid on call to the Bench "for learning."

It sometimes happened that the person whom the Benchers were minded to co-opt, was not willing to accept the honour. No reason is given for this reluctance. It may be that accession to the Bench entailed loss of time by holding office, or expenses which were too heavy for some of the Bar who were worthy of the invitation to the Bench. Whatever the reason, instances are not uncommon. Perhaps the best instance is that of Burnell, Payne, Downes and Rythe in 1551. An order is made that these four are to be spoken to "to know if they will take upon them the Benche."

p. 299 At the next Council, the four are ordered to be called to the Bench at the next moot. At the Council of a fortnight later it is ordered that the three first be called to the Bench next moot, "and that every of them shall take it upon them on pain of expulsion out of the House." Rythe's call is respited, but in May, 1554, Mr. Rythe is ordered to be called to the Bench at the next moot. Three months later he is again ordered to take upon him the Bench at the next moot upon pain of £10 and expulsion. A fortnight later, Mr. Rythe "to be warned to avoid the company of the house for not taking the Bench. Another to be admitted to his chamber." The vacation brought wisdom or compliance, for in October the minute runs, "Mr. Rythe on his humble suit shall take upon him the Bench at the next moot and pay a fine for his contempt."

In 1570, in consequence of a letter from the Privy Council, call to the p. 369 Bench is made conditional on the taking the oath for the supremacy of Queen Elizabeth, and in 1574 sound religious opinions had become an essential qualification for the Bench: for in 1574 it is ordered that Walmeslowe be called to the Bench "if he for his zeal in Religion be thought meet."

The question of precedence at the Bench was raised and settled in 1520, when, four barristers being called to the Bench, disputes arose among them as to their respective precedence or ancienty. A Great Council decided by a majority, that seniority of everyone at the Utter Bar should regulate "the seniority and preferment" at the Bench: this order was subsequently sometimes varied, but it may be said that precedence at the Bench followed seniority at the Bar, except where otherwise ordered.

The respective ancienties both at the Bench and the Bar appear to have been strangely unknown. The Steward on more than one occasion is directed to enter on a roll the ancienties of the members of the Society; and in 1553 the Council adjourn the appointment of a Lent Reader to learn if the Queen's Solicitor has ancienty of Mr. Payne: a question, one would suppose, the Bench could have settled out of hand from the knowledge of some of their number.

The meetings of the Bench for business were styled the General Council, the whole Society of Benchers, the Company of the Bench, the Fellowship of Lincoln's Inn, Rewlers and others of the Bench. They were held in the Chapel of Lincoln's Inn, called the Chapel of S. Richard or of our Lady, until (as far as appears) 1524, when the "Counsell Chamber" is first mentioned; in this chamber the Bench held official communication with the rest of the Society; the form of the order for attendance was, that A. B. should be called "to the Borde's end."

Orders were passed requiring decorum at their meetings. In 1520 every gentleman is to give to other due reverence according to their ancienties and use due order and silence in their communications and arguments within the house. Some years later admonition is given to the younger Masters of the Bench, "better to do their duties unto their ancients of the Bench within the House and other places."

Secrecy was imposed by a resolution of 1526. "If any of the Masters of the Bench or any other privy to the Common Council of this House do disclose anything spoken in the same Council, he shall forfeit for every time so offending 20s."

The privileges of the Bench were not many or excessive. A Bencher in 1442 was entitled as of right to have a yeoman (valettus) boarded in the Inn at a charge of 14d. per week; and in 1517 he could keep his two clerks boarded at 14d. and 18d. respectively, a privilege which in 1557 was cut down to a right to have one clerk only. He alone might enter the buttery to eat and drink, and alone might take his "boyer" in the Hall or carry out of Hall any pot or cup. It was not lawful for any others than Benchers to sit on the Bench in Hall or on the three uppermost seats in Chapel.

The obligations consequent on the position of a Bencher were considerable. Each Bencher had to hold in turn various offices of the Society, to take an active part in the carrying on of the education of those below the Bar, to attend meetings of Council under penalty of a fine, to maintain discipline and punish offenders against the rules and morality of the House.

The statute of 1466 ordains that every Bencher shall keep six whole vacations in the three years immediately after his admission, that is, one month in the Lent Reading and another month in the Autumn Reading.

The Benches claimed and asserted a far-reaching jurisdiction: it extended over members of its own Body in their official or private capacity: Willyam Osseberne, one of the Rulers of the Fellowship, was ordered to make good a loss of 40s. incurred by the Society in consequence of his neglect of duty as a Ruler: John Bradshaw for playing cards at the Porter House of the Rolls, at that time being one of the Rulers of the Fellowship, was compelled to confess his fault in writing and put himself in the grace and correction of the Fellow-ship. It regulated the costume of the Fellows. Wyde was fined for going in his study gown in Cheapside on a Sunday about ten of the clock before noon, and in Westminster Hall in the Term time; and in 1557 costume and beards were the subject of a joint order of the Four Inns. It extended over members of the Inn for acts done without the limits of the Inn. William Elys was put out of the Society in 1481 for being caught with a woman named Grace in a domus suspensa near Newgate.

Ayloff was re-admitted on condition (inter alia) that he should refrain from going to the house of Margaret Halle in Holbourne. Miles Hubbert was fined for breaking the door of the White Hert in Holborn and beating the housewife of the same to the scandal of the Society. It claimed a power to license the bringing of actions by the outside world against one of the fellowship and by one of the fellowship against another. Willyam Elys had taken a pair of rosaries from the wife of Quarles, Citizen and Capper of London, and the Society consider that Quarles may bring an action against Elys to have recovery of the rosaries without displeasing the Society. Mr Dutton (in 1570) may take his remedy at Common Law against Mr. Peterson late Fellow of this Society by appeal of mayhem or otherwise without offence to the Fellowship. It claimed when one of the members was in debt to the Society for dues and charges a right to seize the goods of the debtor in satisfaction, notwithstanding the claims of outside creditors. It claimed to be entitled to enforce performance of the offices of the Society by application to the Queen's Court. The Bench's order in 1570 is "Spencer, Senior shall be Steward of the Reader's Dinner: Mr. Monson and Mr. Recorder to be Suitors to the Lord Keeper for process to bring him up next term and a letter to be sent to the Bishop of Durham to spare him for the exercise of the office." Within the Inn the Bench enforced discipline by fine, suspension from Commons or Chambers, or expulsion from the Society. Imprisonment in the Stocks should probably be added to the list of punishments. In 1576 the Carpenter charged for mending the Stocks: it may be inferred that experience of the usefulness of the institution dictated the repair. Various offences are solemnly recorded in the books, and the entries throw light on the manners of the students of those days.

ASSOCIATE OF THE BENCH.

In 1505 the Bench (first) instituted as it appears a kind of honorary Benchership. Saunders and Rowdon were admitted to aid and advise the Fellowship of the Bench for the good governing of the Inn, but not to vote. These two were thus honoured without any corresponding payment by them, a very rare occurrence in the history of the Inn. The institution appears to have been popular and from time to time others were admitted as Associates to or Assistants of the Bench on payment of fines varying from 40s. to £20. They were in most cases senior men or ancient Utter Barristers. It was determined that they should not sit above any person called to the Bench for learning nor "shall have any prehemonyence to entermeddle with anything, but only to sitt at table and take there diett there." The last two appointed in this volume were Sulyard "Landlord of this House" and Lambarde the Antiquary, both of whom, it is specially noted, were appointed without payment, and a caution appears in the minute of the appointment of the latter that it is not to be a precedent.

UTTER BARRISTER.

This name appears early in the Text. The Statute of 1466, specifies those at the bar called Utter Barristers. Later on in 1468, Extra barram is used; in 1572, Outer Utter Barrister, and in 1585, Outward Barristers.
Preface.

The origin of the name which hitherto has been doubtful can by the aid of the text be explained. An authority of the time of H: VIII.* explains the reason of the name to be that the Uttermost Barristers sit outermost on "the formes which are called the Barr." The report may be taken to establish that the Utter Bar did sit outermost and the Inner Bar innermost on the forms and that the forms were in some Inns called the Barr. In the text Barr is never used in the sense of form; but Barristers are described as sitting on a form. If Barristers sitting side by side on a form are described as extra or infra Barram, it must be for the reason that while so sitting they are from some point of view respectively extra and infra, that is, outside and below or within a Bar; and a Bar must have been existing when the names extra and infra Barram were invented. The following solution of the origin of the name may be correct.

The arrangement at the Moot appears to have resembled the arrange-ment of a Court of Justice. At the upper end of the hall, taking Lincoln's Inn as the locus in quo, was "the 'Bench,'" on which the Benchers sat; facing the Bench was "theforme and trestelles," on which sat the Outer and Inner Barristers who were engaged in the Moot. Between the Bench and "the forme" ran the Barr. If the Barr extended the whole length of "the forme" both classes of Barristers would, viewed from the Bench, justly earn the name of infra Barram: and it is not possible that, of the four Barristers sitting side by side thus below the Barr, two could be called extra Barram and two infra Barram. If, however, the Barr was not so long as the "forme," but extended only in front of the Inner Barristers, then the Barristers sitting outermost on each end of the form could be described as extra, i.e., sitting outside on the right and left of the Barr; and the two Inner Barristers would appear infra, i.e., below or within the Barr. In this way, it is submitted, can the names of Utter or Outer and Inner Barrister be successfully explained.

Call to the Bar was in 1494 directed to be made in full term by the advice and discretion of the Governors, for the time being, and the Benchers present. Interference by outsiders or "foreign suit" of call was forbidden, and "letters of preferment" from outsiders after 1577 disqualified the candidate. Examination tested the fitness of the candidates in 1558, and ten years afterwards, Call was made only on the report of a Reader in Chancery with "two Barristers of the best learned and discreetest, as to the learning and honesty of half-a-dozen men or thereabouts." The report was submitted to the Bench before every term in which "there was likely to be a Call." This phrase may mean that the number of Calls depended on the vacancies at the Bar (a measure of protection provided in a different fashion by many trade guilds and societies): or that there were not in every term men qualified for Call.

The Call seems to have been announced at the Moot or Reading, but the candidate was actually called to the Bar in Hall at supper-time on Call Night by the most ancient, being a Reader then present; probably the Call was followed by the admission of the candidate to the table of the Bar. The date of the Call was recorded in the later times by the Steward, whose duty it was to certify the ancieney of each Barrister when necessary.

Within one month after Call, the Barrister had to take "the Barre upon him according to the ancient orders of this House," failing which he was not received. A later order of 1571 shows what was required; "all called to the pp. 380, Barre to Moot their Moots for their forme before the end of the term, or else to be uncalled." Possibly the order as to those who "assiduously keep formam suam" on p. 49 may refer to this practice. It seems that the Barrister on Call went through a kind of inceptio: by the performance of his duties he became formally invested with his degree or office, and his new status was formally recognised by the Members of the order to which he had been admitted. Similarly Serjeants-at-Law were called upon to count,* and Queen's Counsel are invited to move on being called within the Bar.

If the Barrister had, as was not unfrequently the case, been admitted to the Society with an exemption from serving the offices of the Society, he was compelled to release and relinquish his special pardon of office or other things to him before granted, and in 1577 was required to enter into a bond of £40 for due execution of all offices and payment of fines on default.

The education of a Barrister did not cease with his Call to the Bar. He had to give diligent attendance at all Learnings, especially in Learning Vacations, as well in the Inn as at Chancery Mootes for (in 1574) three years after Call. The orders by the Privy Council of that date prescribed, that until he had for five years been an Utter Barrister continuing in exercise of learning, he was not to be admitted to plead at any Court at Westminster, or to subscribe any action, bill, or plea, nor plead before the Justices of Assize unless by their permission.

The Outer Bar are stated in 1468 to be entitled to a liberatura, i.e., an allowance, later on spoken of as "Boyer" or "Boyer pott." The term meant to the Outer Bar of Lincoln's Inn, as reference to the several notices will show, a pint and a half of ale or beer with bread, served either at the Butterly hatch, or taken to chambers after evensong. After 1558, Barristers of eight years' continuance alone were allowed Boyer.

Authority in some cases was exercised by the Outer Bar. In 1493 they intervene with the approval of the Bench to correct and punish an assault and affray made by Newenam junior on Walter Hobart: and in time of vacation they were authorised to assist the Steward in levying Commons. Further, they had in some degree a control of moots as will be found later on.

Those of them who committed offences were duly fined by the Bench: one instance of what seems to have been a practical joke is recorded in the Autumn Vacation of 1520. Six Masters of the Society were "amerced for a doe taken away at the gate of Lincoln's Inn from a poor man who was coming to speak with Danastre, and who left his horse at the gate bearing a doe." The fines amounted to 16s. 8d. out of which the poor man received 2s. 8d. and the coffers of the Inn the rest.

CLERK.

A person seeking to become a member of the Society was proposed for admission at the instance of a Bencher or other person, such as a Judge or Serjeant-at-Law, who had been connected with the Inn. Apparently, by 1535, persons who were unworthy had become members of the Inn without being subjected to proper previous investigation. For in that year the Inn reverted to what was said to be the old rule of the house "that a person to be admitted be first personally presented to the Bench at the Board's End in the Hall, to the intent that the Bench may substantially inquire of his demeanour and conversation, and at whose instance he shall be so admitted." Before this date, the fine payable on admission even by those intending to pursue the study of the law had varied: but it was now fixed at three shillings, whereof twenty pence went to the Keeper of the Black Book for entering his name in the book, fourpence to the Butler, and 12 pence for Chapel lights. In 1565, Benchers' sons were admitted on payment of 13s. 4d. only: and in the next twenty years attempts to settle a sum for admissions with a due regard to the interests of Davy's Inn and Furnival's Inn resulted in this tariff; those who had not been at any Inn of Chancery paid five marks; those who had been at Furnival's Inn or Davy's Inn for a year paid £1 13s. 4d.; and those who had been at any other Inn of Chancery paid £2 13s. 4d.
The Candidate was then admitted as a Fellow of the Society, but as a Clerk and "to sit at" i.e. to be boarded at Clerks' Commons. The phrase shows that the Clerks must have sat at a table by themselves.

The reader must bear in mind that in the Text the term Clerk is applied to two classes of persons: the Clerks of the Society whose position is under review, and the Clerks of the Benchers and Utter Barristers. The distinction is brought out in the Steward's accounts for 1499 and 1500. pp. 118, The double application of this term suggests that originally the Student became a Clerk to the Utter Barrister, serving in fact a kind of apprenticeship.

After 1498 the word clericus is only once used to denote the whole class before that date known as "Clerks," though the term, Clerks' Commons, still remains in use. Reading the orders of 1501, 1506, and 1556, and bearing in mind that no mention is made of any entrance examination, it is clear that those admitted must have varied in their status, in the extent of their education, and in the objects with which they entered the Society. That some were but imperfectly educated may be inferred from the mention of a grammar school held in the Hall. If they had all intended to pursue the practice of the law, it would not have been necessary to order, that henceforth no one was to be at Clerks' Commons unless he exercised himself about the Laws of the Land. If the social status of all had been good, each would have been "decorously clad, and not with his shirt in public view beyond his doublet at his neck." From the terms of the order of 1556 it may be safely inferred that of the students who studied the law, some intended to come to the Bar, some to practice as Attorneys, and others were actually in practice as Attorneys. It is therefore reasonable, that as appears in the order on Moots, there should be Students or Hearers, and Fellows of the Inner Bar, i.e., persons sufficiently advanced to be able to take part in the exercises, and this conclusion is confirmed by the reference in the order of Council to a person who is allowed student or Inner Barrister by the Bench. The conclusion may be shortly stated in the terms in use from 1498 to the end of this volume, "the young gentlemen Fellows of this House" were divided and classified into "Students" and "Inner Barristers."

Clerks were compelled to keep six vacations during the first three years after their admission, or at least four following vacations in the three years. Mr. Coys' case, which is remarkable for being the first recorded admission of a University Student, well sets out the practice in 1578—

"Mr. Coys was excused from keeping his first Christmas and vacations after the Common order within the first three years, for that it is informed that he is as yet a student in the University, and entended there to bestowe a further time on the confirmation of his previous studies; but when he comes to continue here he shall keep the first Christmas then next, and his three vacations within the next three years."

It is, of course, the young Gentlemen who figure oftenest among those who are punished by the Bench. Their offences range from attempts at murder to practical jokes, such as taking quince pies out of the oven, taking three parts of a doe out of the kitchen, killing coney in the garden. Probably the offence stated in the entry on p. 126: "Pulleyn put out of Commons for refusing to carry Saxby's body to the grave as ordered by divers of the Bench," was a breach of a custom of the Society to take part in the funeral of a deceased member.

As has been stated, persons were admitted Fellows who were not practising the law and had no intention of doing so. The order of 1494 gravely sets out the evil which the number of such admissions had caused to the Society. These persons were admitted to sit at Fellows' Commons or Clerks' Commons, or only to repasts. This last admission seems to mean that the person admitted was allowed to take a meal at pleasure on paying no more than the price of the meal. The consideration for granting such an admission was a benefit to the Inn, past, present, or to come. Instances are, a cask of Gascon wine; venison in greater or less quantities; the bringing of two fellows of good conversation; the being a good fellow; being an Esquire of the King's Body or a member of the Royal Household. The period for which the privilege was granted was not always the same. Gloucestre was admitted until his daughter married, died, or took the veil.

THE EXECUTIVE.
The Executive and the Officers of the Society were: (1) the Governors or Rulers; (2) the Reader; (3) the Dean of Chapel; (4) the Treasurer; (5) the Keeper of the Black Books; (6) the Marshall; (7) the Pensioner; (8) the Butler for Christmas; (9) the Steward for Christmas; (10) the Master of the Revels; (11) the Escheator. The head servants of the Society were the Butler and the Steward. These will now be treated in the above order.

GOVERNORS.
At the head of the Society stood the Gubernatores or Rectores (Englished by Governors or Rulers) to whom each fellow and clerk on admission swore to be "obediens, assistans et consortans." The Governors were elected on the feast of All Saints, from which festival the year of the Society ran.
list of Governors is the first entry in the minutes of that day in nearly every year until 1574, when the Governors cease to be recorded, and the office ceases to exist. The normal number of Governors is four: in the instances when a greater number is recorded, it is probable from the context that Benchers who were holding other offices have per incuriam, been included in the list. The election was by the Benchers out of their number: most Governors serve for one year only and after that no other office except, in a few instances, that of Reader. The Governors were the executive of the Fellowship and from time to time made ordinances which were recognised as binding on the Society. Probably custom had imposed a limit on their authority, for the body of Benchers are found to make orders in matters apparently too grave to be dealt with by the Governors.

The Rulers themselves, as has been stated, were not exempt from censure by the Fellowship for negligence in control or offences against the rules of the Inn.

The other officers of the Society are treated in the following pages in the order of their rank in the yearly list of officers.

READER.

This is an office which existed before 1464, when the Council ordered that the Autumn Reader should be elected in the previous Easter Term, and the Lent Reader in the previous Michaelmas Term; but the volume contains no reference to the creation of the office, very little as to the duties of Reader, and no hint as to the general character of the Readings. Information on these points must be sought elsewhere.

From the minutes it appears two Readers were elected from the Bench by their fellow Benchers. The Readers were always men of mark in the Inn. The Privy Council, for instance, in the reign of Elizabeth, write a special letter to the then Lent Reader requiring him individually to take the oath for the supremacy of the Queen. The post was considered to confer distinction on the occupant. A member of the Inn made a Serjeant-at-Law was appointed to read at the next Learning Vacation in place of any member already appointed “according to the ancient order of Serjeants.” Readers were asked to read a second and a third time, and a Treble Reader, as he was then called, was a person of much honour, entitled to increased allowances.

Two Readers were elected, an Autumn and a Lent Reader. For some reason until the year 1488, the name of the Autumn Reader is rarely given in the Black Books. The Autumn Reader was the better paid, receiving in 1576, £14, while the Lent Reader was paid only £8; it is probable the Autumn Reader was put to more expense than the Lent Reader. By p. 125 ancient custom each Reader read for four weeks; but it is not clear when the month of either Reader began or ended. The dinner of the Lent Reader is stated on one occasion to have taken place in the 4th week in Lent, and the reading probably began and ended in Lent. The Autumn p. 377 Vacation and Reading began on August 1st, and ended about Bartholomew- tide, the festival of that Saint being August 24th.

Some sort of jurisdiction over the Readings appears to have been vested in the Judges. In 1578, the Reader was sickly and the Judges were asked their pleasure whether, "although Mr. Reader be willing to read, yet considering his weakness it be convenient to have a Reading."

A letter is preserved of Feb. 23rd., 1554, warning a Bencher of his appointment to the Readership. It is couched in a strange mixture of command and invitation, but the occasion seems to have been extraordinary and the form of the letter may have been unusual.

The Reader was entitled to order a mass to be said in the vacation at his pleasure. Four Readers were required to join in the appointment of anyone of the female staff: "No woman shall repair to any chamber as laundress, chamberdresser, or bedmaker, except such as are allowed by four of the Readers." The entry "Md. to call the Company and exhort them to leave knocking on the pots and making noise in Hall and not to inquiet Mr. Reader in the vacaccion of his study," it is to be hoped, referred solely to the conduct of the Junior fellows.

The main part of the entries refer to the social obligations of the Reader's office.

p. 182 Each Reader gave a Dinner and a Supper (potatio) during his Reading. To defray the expenses of the wine at the dinner and perhaps the supper also, each Reader down to 1557 was allowed one or more admissions, i.e., the fees payable or perhaps the sum which could be extracted for a person or persons nominated by him for admission. In that year a special allowance p. 318 was made of 40s. to each Reader in lieu of admissions. The amount of the p. 400 allowance increased and in 1576 the Society paid £8 to the Lent Reader, and £14 to the Autumn Reader.

But great expense, it seems, fell on the Steward of the Reader's Dinner. pp. 289, This official was nominated by the Bench for each Reader's Dinner, out of 329 the Outer Bar, in order of seniority. His position was perilous. He had to provide all the eatables, except in the case of the autumn dinner, for which p. 172 twelve bucks were supplied by the Society. He was allowed to charge 16d. p. 166 a head for the Dinner or Supper and no more; and had, consequently, to make good a deficit out of his own pocket. It is not stated that the Readers contributed towards the expenses of the Steward. If the person nominated refused to serve, he was fined; the like fate befell him if his preparation for the dinner was held "miserable and miserly." Apparently the Steward's position became unbearable, and in 1535, "some able (pecuniarily able) attorney, officer, or such like, as do not follow the study and learning of the law," was to be joined with the Steward to bear half the charges of the Steward for the time being. Some three years after, the Steward was ordered not to spend 40s. over and above the amount received by him. But the cost kept on increasing, until in 1567 each Fellow under the Bench was ordered to contribute 20d. towards the cost of the Dinner. Men became unwilling to serve although the penalty for refusal was as high as £30. So at the close of this volume in 1578, in consideration of the great charges that the Stewards of the Reader's Dinner had been at, two outer Barristers were appointed joint Stewards paying 20s. for the privilege of being appointed jointly.

For the Reader's Supper or Drinking each Fellow in 1567 contributed 4d.: and two persons were nominated in 1568 by the Outer Bar, who should bear the charge on pain of £5; from 1581 four gentlemen under the Bar were always chosen Stewards of the Reader's Drinking. The Reader paid the cost of the Supper, but men were found unwilling to serve the office of Steward, though they were fined for the refusal £5 towards the cost of the Supper.

DEAN OF CHAPEL WITH THE CHAPEL AND CHAPLAIN.

The Chapel Divine Service was, as now, under the care of one of the Bench, elected yearly to the post known in 1452 as Clerk of the Chapel, and in 1571 as Dean of Chapel. The Dean from the year 1574 to the close of this volume is the first mentioned in the yearly list of officers of the Society.

The notices of the Chapel and of the Chaplain may fitly be gathered in this place. The Chapel from the earliest period was used as a place for making and receiving payments and for holding meetings. Probably the Chapel and the Hall during the 15th century were the only places in which an assemblage of members could be accommodated: as the Chapel of S. Richard, it is the meeting place of the Great Council of 1466: the Council of 1497 is held in the Chapel of St. Mary: both names it may be presumed applying to the same place as there is no entry of a new Chapel having been built. A contribution, called Chapel Silver, by each member of the Inn is noted as early as 1428. Later entries inform us that each member on admission paid 12d., which was applied to the supply of Chapel Lights: and... a further sum was paid by the Escheator for lights at Christmas: the torches or standers supplied by him were required to be of the weight of four score pounds.

The accounts contain entries of purchases for the Chapel, which reflect the religious feelings of the time. In 1437 a chalice, corporal, and a white cloth for the corporal, and in 1508 cloths for the chalice and linen for vestments are bought. The accession of Edward VI. is marked by a charge of 14s. for a Bible and homilies and a desk, followed in 1550 by a new table called “a communion table,” and the next year by the purchase of a new Book of Common Prayer. The entries in 1554 show that Mary has come to the throne. Rastell, a Bencher, gives a great picture of the descent from the Cross with curtains: and the priest in return is to say a collect for the soul of Rastell’s wife, Winifred. To the entry of this order a Protestant has added a marginal note to the effect that this order was cancelled, “propter stolidam abhominacionem et superstitionem, 23 Eliz.” Then follow purchases of breviaries, pyx, holy water stock, and vestments, an image of S. Richard, and the painting of the images of Blessed Mary and S. Richard. Elizabeth is scarcely on the throne when the Treasurer provides Books to serve the Chaplain to say service in the Chapel, and the altar is removed. Fifteen shillings is paid for the Book of Communion. In 1567, linen for the “Lord’s table” is bought at a cost of 13s. 8d. In 1571, “a certain great stone called an altar stone which was in the Chapel” is sold for 5s.: the old chalice is sold for 53s. 4d. and a silver gilt chalice called a Communion Cup bought for £17 15s. 9d. Two books of Homilies are added, and two years later Books of Common Prayer.

The officiating person in 1441 was John the Chaplain; one of his successors is described as Priest of Lincoln’s Inn; another, Sir Geoffrey, as the Rector of the Inn: the wages are 53s. 4d. for the year: the like sum, it may be noted, was paid for the services of the Manciple. In 1505, the Chaplain celebrates a requiem mass every Friday for the soul of John Nethersale who left 40 marks to the Library. In 1515 a second chaplain is appointed, Sir Robert Drury, in consideration of his son being admitted to the Inn, having given the Society the salary of a Chaplain for ever. In the very next year “the parson for playing cards and dice in Chambers is fined a wax taper of 1-lb. weight, to stand before the image of the Holy and Blessed Mary the Virgin.”

The surname of the Chaplain begins to be given, in 1521, and two are styled Sir Thomas Wittacre, Chaplain, and Sir W. Brugges, Chaplain. The first-named is stabbed by a Barrister, if not a Bencher, in 1523, and it is to be feared that the attack was not unprovoked, for the Bench order that Doctor "Whyteacres" take no more meals, till he have spoken with "my Masters of the Bench."

The last entry in which the Chaplain is styled "Sir" is in 1559; "Mr.
Coke," the Chaplain, first appears in 1563. Next several special preachers follow in succession, beginning in 1571 with Mr. Porder, Concionator, who preaches two sermons for 20s., until in 1581 a Divinity Reader is appointed; and the last entry in this volume affecting the chaplaincy, is the payment of £10 to Mr. Charke, the Preacher, for his wages, and 40s. to Davies, the Chaplain, for a new gown. Appendix VIII. contains two letters showing that the leave of the Lords of the Privy Council was asked for the appointment of Mr. Charke by the Society, and graciously granted.

The reign of Elizabeth is further marked by an ordinance that every p. 408 Fellow is at least once a year to receive Holy Communion in the Chapel, and another ordinance fining every Fellow under the Bench absent from p. 438 morning prayer, the sum of 4d.

TREASURER.

The Treasurer's post was not created until 1455, when "a Treasurer of the Inn was elected by the Society, to wit, ThomasVmfrey, was elected to that office to receive all receipts at the Treasury and the charge of discon-tinuances and all other things of this kind." In the next year's list the Treasurer ranks after the Governors—but by the close of this volume, when Governors have ceased to be elected and additional officers have been appointed, his position in the list of officers is after the Dean of Chapel, the Marshal, the Lent Reader, and the Autumn Reader. He receives all the income of the Society, the balance of the Pensioner's account, the balance, if any, of the Steward's account, the Chapel silver, and all fines, and makes all payments which the Pensioner does not make. He keeps the keys of the Treasury and cancels tallies. The treasure is in his custody. In pp. 8, 51 1546 the Society order that he grants admissions to chambers. Admissions
p. 27 to certain assigned chambers came to him "for his only fee": and when no Fellows are admitted to chambers during his term of office, there is no
p. 364 Treasurer's Supper. He apparently has to give more than one supper, for in
p. 387 1578 "Mr. Treasurer's suppers are dispensed with, so that he pay two tierces
p. 412 of wine and bestow somewhat on the ordinary supper in hall." The Society pay 6s. 8d. to the Treasurer for the supper of the Governors on one occasion: p. 432 so it is probable that he, like the Pensioner, gave one supper to the Governors on the passing of his accounts, and to this the Society were wont to contribute. He is fined for absence from Council, and for going to foreign p. 293 parts without leave.
A dealing of the Bench with the Treasurer deserves notice. "Mr. Henry p. 286 Heydon, Treasurer of the House, of his own free will, promised to the Governors of the same for to give one chest for the safe custody of the purchase of the said House and all other Books of accompt concerning the same." This took place on February 2nd, 1548. The year went by and the chest was not delivered; but a promise to the Bench was apparently a serious matter, and on the day year of the promise, the Bench order that p. 289 "Mr Henry Heydon shall, between this and this day senight, bring in his chest that he promised for the records of Lincoln's Inn upon pain of 40s."

By the year 1567 the work of the Treasurer had so much increased that the Society appointed an Under-Treasurer to help him at a fee of 20s., and in 1569 resolved that every Treasurer should have his Under-Treasurer in future.

KEEPER OF THE BLACK BOOK.

Though the Black Books are mentioned many times between 1422 and 1513, it is not until the latter date that the Keeper of the Black Book is mentioned among the officers of the Society. His duties begin to be defined by orders in 1529. He is fined for not being present at the Pensioner's Supper and not having the Black Book at Council. His duty is to enter the "estretes" of Council within eight days on pain of 20s., and the accounts of the Treasurer and Pensioner before the end of the Trinity Term next after they are passed. In 1553 he was ordered to enter the names of all those present at the Council. After Lincoln's Inn had been purchased and conveyed to feoffees, it became his duty to make search for the feoffees at Allhallowen and report whether any had died since the last enquiry. At one time he entered every admission, receiving 20d. for each entry.

MARSHALL.

This officer represented the Bench at the Christmas festivities, and the account of his duties will be found under the head of Christmas.

PENSIONER.

The Pensioner is first mentioned in the Black Books in 1427; yet it is clear from the nature of his office that some one must have performed his duties from the time the Society had a habitation. His duty was to collect the Pension,* which was the contribution (amounting in 1461 to 12d. a term,

---

* The word pensio is used in the same connection in the Statuta Aularia of the University of Oxford 1483-9; the pensio camera is to be paid by every occupant.
and in 1463 to 16d. a term), levied from each Fellow to pay the standing charges of the Inn.

Out of the Pension Fund he paid generally the rent of the Inn and of the Coney garth and Garden, the wages of the Chaplain, the necessaries for the Chapel, and the wages of the servants of the House. He was entitled to a potatio or supper during or at the close of his year of office, and a purse fee of 3s. 4d. or 6s. 8d. The balance in his hands he paid to the Treasurer, and his account had to be passed before All Saints' Day in each year. He was exempted from moots, but had to give his personal attendance in the Inn, and be in Commons the whole of the Term and Learning Vacations. He was not a Bencher, and those who became Benchers before serving the office, paid a fine for escaping the service.

The Butler for Christmas, the Steward for Christmas, and the Master of the Revels will be found under the head of Christmas later on.

ESCHEATOR.

The duty of this officer was to provide fuel for Christmas and torches for the Chapel. He appears in 1428, and disappears in 1583. His appellation varies without apparent reason. Collector denariorum focalium, Colegaderer, Collector grossum carbonum, Collector pro focale, Colyar, Gardien del Bois are some of the names given to his office. In 1475 4d. a head was ordered to be collected from every Fellow to be laid out in fuel. In 1570 the tax was raised to 8d. In 1547 he bought coal at 19s. 9d. a quarter, and in 1551 at 1s. a quarter less. The office was served by a student or one not yet called to the Bar: and was probably the first office served.

SERVANTS OF THE INN.

The Society had two chief servants, the Butler and the Steward, and several minor servants, the Master and Under Cook, the Turnbroche, the Manciple, who bought the meat and was under the Steward, the Clerk of the Pantry, the Pannierman, the Laundress, perhaps a Bacularius or Beadle (the text is obscure), a Fool (Lobbe le Folet is the only fool mentioned) and a Minstrel or Minstrels. Robert the Minstrel, otherwise Robert Jugleger, the Harper, is mentioned at p. 306. Of these minor servants none need be further mentioned, but the two chief servants will require a few lines.

BUTLER OR CHIEF BUTLER.

This officer must not be confounded with the Butler for Christmas, who was a member of the Society. It was not uncommon, however, for the Butler after faithful service to be admitted a member of the Society.
Ashfield in 1465 and perhaps Elyott in 1423 was so admitted; John More, grandfather of Sir Thomas More, was admitted for like reason in 1470.

This officer appears to have performed a variety of duties. He did all the writing for the Society: wrote the Pension Roll and Treasurer's Roll: catalogued the Library, kept the Register Book and the pedigree of Mr. Sulyard*; kept a list of those who used and kept each term and vacation: made a note of the evidences (title deeds) of the Society; engrossed the indentures and wrote all the evidences of the Society in a parchment book. He checked the Students who spoke loud and high in the Hall; collected fees on admission, and searched for those who had been admitted without having passed a year in a House of Chancery before admission to the Inn, and occasionally superintended the erection of new buildings. It would perhaps be going too far to assert that the delicate investigation conducted by Pounder fell in the ordinary course of the Butler's duty.

The Butler in the earlier days ran some risk from the violence of the members of the Inn. In 1502, Vane the Butler was assaulted in Hall to the drawing of blood. In 1503, Segiswyk (afterwards Reader) assaulted the Butler with his drawn sword. Veer in 1509 committed an assault and affray on the Butler with his dagger in the presence of divers Benchers. One Butler who is recorded as having been so assaulted in the year 1505-6 bore the name of Hugh Holbein: a surname which became famous in the next reign.

The record of one of the Butlers presents several points of interest. It shows the unconventionality of spelling prevalent in that age and the time taken by a successful man to rise to the Bench.

1468, Michaelmas Term, John Botiller was admitted to the Society at the special instance of John Suliard one of the Governors, and was admitted to repasts, because he had borne himself well and faithfully in the office of Butler. 1471-2, Master of the Revels, John Boteler. 1474, Chief Butler for Christmas, John Botelor. 1475, Pensioner, John Boteler. 1476, John Botyler was put out of the Society for drawing a dagger in Hall against William Elys to strike him therewith. He was fined 20s. for his re-admission (afterwards reduced to 6s. 8d). 1477, John Boteler was Collector for John Sulyard and Roger Townysend, Serjeants-at-Law: in the same year Boteler pays 6s. 8d. for his fine. 1478, Marshall, John Botiler. 1479, Auditor of Steward's accounts, Botiller. 1479, Auditor of Treasurer's accounts, Botiller. 1480, Auditor of Pensioner's accounts, Botiller. 1482, Autumn Reader,

* To test claims by the heirs of Sulyard under the grant on p. ii, ante.
John Boteler. 1483, Governor, John Butlere (in this year he proposes for admission to the Society an ex-butler indifferently called W. Odiham and William Wodam). 1487, Lent Reader, John Butler. 1493, John Botiller, senior, one of the ancients of the Bench. 1495, John Boteler, recently elected, named and promoted to the state and degree of the King's Serjeant-at-Law. November 14, 1510, John Boteler a Justice of the King's Bench is present at a Council.

STEWARD.

This officer, like the Butler, must be distinguished from the officer of the same title for Christmas, who was a member of the Society. The Steward was not a member; and John More is one of four recorded to have been admitted to that honour. This officer is first mentioned in 1431, as the person to whom the fine of 6s. 8d., for playing dice within the Inn after nine o'clock at night, was to be paid. He enters in 1429 into a bond "to do all things that longeth a Steward to do." What these things were may partly be collected from his account in 1462, which shows his duty was to pay the tradesmen of the Society, and to receive the sums payable for commons by the fellows of the Society. With reference to his accounts, it may be remarked that three words are found in them, of which two are found also in the Temple Records, and the third it is believed only in these books. The two first are "apparels and emendals." These words apparently describe the totals on each side of his account with the Society, apparels being disbursements, emendals receipts. Their meaning is shown by the entry on p. 111. "No wages allowed to the Steward this year, because the apparels exceed the emendals." The third word is "les puttes." The practice was for the Steward in his account to charge the Treasurer with the amount of Commons which remained unpaid after the ordinary time for payment had gone by: his account was then passed, and it was the duty of the Treasurer to get the amounts in. In the Steward's accounts, the item is for Commons and repasts "put" (positus) to the Treasurer, and this item was shortly Englished by "les puttes," a contraction or an Anglicism for positus. The word first appears in the accounts of the Treasurer at p. 150; and in 1509 a solemn ordinance is made for "lez puttes."

The Steward was entitled to a certain poundage and to wages of £3 6s. 8d. The latter were liable to reduction, if his account was in apparels. With the Butlers, he was to report those that "shall speak loud and high at meal time in the Hall, and cause such persons to cease their high speech." His duties brought him, like the Butler, into collision with some of the Fellows. Myners was put out of Commons by the Governors because he violently took away the Steward's dagger and gave him vile words.
BARRISTERS' CLERKS.

The regulations about Barristers' Clerks may here be noticed as one set of them mark the growth of the Inn. In 1442 only two Barristers were by special leave authorised to have a clerk at Yeomen's Commons. In 1490 the Hall was pulled down and probably enlarged, so that the Inn were able in 1528 to allow each Barrister a clerk in Commons at 14d. a week. Twenty years later this privilege was limited to those who were diligent in learning, and the charge for board increased to 1s. 6d. a week. In 1558 no Barrister of less than eight years' continuance was allowed to have a clerk in Commons. This was followed in 1582 by an order that no Utter Barrister should have a clerk in Commons "until further order be taken for enlarging the Hall," showing that at this date the increase of members of the Inn made the boarding of clerks an impossibility.

The Bench exercised jurisdiction over the Barristers' Clerks. In 1535 an order was made that all clerks should be licenced by the Bench; and that such clerk should only be allowed in "Commons as can read and understand his Latin tongue, and that can also write or intend to learn to write." Four years later no man's clerk was allowed to sit in Hall without a gown. The responsibility of a clerk for his master's attendance was early recognised by the Bench. When that body found it difficult to enforce proper attendance at the Moots, they fined every Barrister who failed after assignment to Moot, and put his clerk out of Commons for that term or vacation and the next term; thus making the education of the master a matter of interest to the clerk.

The Barristers' Clerks boarded at the table of the Valetti, the yeomen or servants of the Fellows of the Inn. Except that "Cribell" bread is ordered to be provided for this table there is no further entry about the Valetti; unless, as may be the case, that some of the persons who were brought up for such offences as beating the Cook, beating the Gardener's wife were Valetti and not clerks or members of the Inn.

EDUCATION.

The legal year was divided into Terms, Learning Vacations, and, filling what was left of the year, Mesne Vacations. The Learning Vacations were defined in 1422 as from the Vigil of Christmas to the morrow of Epiphany, from the Vigil of Palm Sunday for three weeks following, and for the two weeks next before Michaelmas and the week after that feast. The first of these Vacations was mainly taken up by the Revel; but it seems to have been obligatory on the Junior Bar to keep three Christmas Vacations. When the Black Books open, the practice existed of assigning certain persons to keep "le Nowell" i.e., the Christmas, and these persons appear to have been all in statu pupillari. The technical term for keeping was "continuing" and the not keeping "a discontinuance," for which a fine was inflicted.

During the Lent and Autumn Vacations the Readings were held, as has already been stated when the Readership was under discussion.

Probably to secure the attendance of seniors at Vacations, in 1436 nineteen of the leading members of the Inn covenant and promise with each other to continue on certain days and parts of Vacations. In 1466 the order is made that each Bencher shall keep six Vacations in the three years after his Call to the Bench, by one month at Lent, and one month in Autumn at the time of the Reading, and be personally present at the Reading for the first week. Increased attendance was required of the Bench after 1570. Every Bencher was required to keep all Vacations up to the time of his first Reading, and five vacations during the three years next following. Benchers living in the "town" of Westminster were enjoined to come daily to the Readings and Moots in the Learning Vacations. By the year 1572 the attendance of the Bench appears to have slackened, and the penalty for default was raised to 40s. for every Vacation lost.

Up to the year 1518, no minute appears of any order compelling the attendance of the Outer Bar at Readings, but the regulations of that year and 1529 culminated in an order of 1543, that no Utter Barrister should be allowed "to have any Boyer pot or Clerk to sit in Commons unless he give his diligent attendance at all Learnings, and especially in the Learning Vacations, as well within this House as at Chancery Moots." This order, affecting the personal comfort of the Outer Bar, seems to have been successful, as no further order is recorded in this volume.

The only order affecting the Junior Bar on this point runs, that the young men keep their first four vacations together, i.e., continuously.

Besides the readings, education was carried on by moots and bolts. The text does not show the distinction between the two; but the penalty for a "bolt faile" was 20d., and for a "motefaile" 3s. 6d. or 6s. 8d. Days are termed either mootable or boltable; and on the occasion of the illness of a Reader bolts were to be kept on such nights as there were no moots in the Houses of Chancery; so that it is clear a marked distinction must have existed. *

The institution of moots was of long standing in the Society; so far

* There is ground for supposing that a bolt was argued by students alone; whereas a moot was argued by Utter and Inner Barristers.
back as 1427, Robert Baynard was expelled the Society for disobedience and default in mooting.

The procedure of moots, technically known as mota ad barram, can to some extent be gathered from the entries recording the infliction of fines for breaches of the practice, and orders made by the Bench at various times: and the following attempt is made to reproduce the practice.

A meeting was held to assign the moot, a phrase apparently meaning to fix upon persons to argue the moot. It was held in the evening in the Hall and the Butler was ordered to wait on the meeting with the Candle and the Book. Benchers and Utter Barristers whose puisnes were at the Bench were exempted from mooting and bolting. It was the duty of the ancient pp. 316, and puisne Utter Barrister to moot at the beginning of term, and of the puisne of those two to assign other two to moot at the next moot and give them notice thereof. The appointment for Chapel moots was made by the puisne Utter Barrister in the first instance.

The order in which persons took the moot was not always the same: originally the moot was assigned in order of Chambers, as they lay in the Inn: then it was assigned to Utter Barristers and none other: this change was not approved and the order of Chambers reverted to: no reason for either course appears, except that the second course seemed to the Governors not so good for learning as the old Rule. The case was chosen by the Utter Barrister, to whom it was assigned. It was his duty to assign the case with deliberation so that the two Inner Barristers, whose duty it was to write the case, should be able to write it with leisure. The Inner Barristers, having written the case, had to take it to the Utter Barrister and tender it to him before the close of mass on the following day, and it was the duty of the Utter Barrister then to receive it.

The days for keeping Moots in Term were ordained in 1583 to be every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday—the holidays then allowed, and the first and last day, the day of the Reader's Dinner and Drinking, alone excepted. In the Learning Vacation Moots and Bolts were held on Sundays and Festival days. In the Mesne Vacations there were three Chapel Moots every week except any holiday was the "let" thereof. The assignments were made by the puisne Utter Barrister.

The Moots were held during Term and the Learning Vacation in Hall after supper. The presiding body were the Benchers, represented in 1560 by the senior and puisne of the Bench in their ancienty by turn, who were in Commons and in residence, and such of the Bench as were dwelling in town, i.e., in Westminster. In the earlier days of the Society, if there were not sufficient Benchers present, it was customary for the Benchers there to call up Utter Barristers to the Bench "who were not intended to remain on the Bench but to go back to the Bar when the occasion passed." In front of them on a form running behind the Bar, sat the Utter and Inner Barristers engaged in the Moot and on other forms sat the ancient and puisne Barristers according to the order prescribed to the Bench in seniority, pp. 330, and the Inner Bar.

The form and matter of the case were carefully attended to. It was not to contain above two points argumentable: bringing in a matter which was no matter of law was finable; and two Barristers who brought "in a formedone in reverter upon condition broken, whereas there never was any such forme of writ and declaracion, whereby the Moot failed" were fined 3s. 4d. each. The fate of one offender against the rule of the Inn here deserves mention. Meynell, one of the Utter Barristers, was negligent, and took little study in his last Mote, and was not "conformabyle" to the saying and order of the Benche in his learning and mooting, but presumptuously said to the Benche that they could not bring in the learning better than it was brought in: he was put out of Commons.

The case was to be cast into the form of pleadings and after the argument at the Bar, in which Utter Barristers were expected to join, the puisne of the Bench recited the whole pleading according to the ancient custom. Then the Bench advanced such arguments as pleased them. If any of the Bench argued more than two points the Reader was to show him that "he breaketh the Common Order."

A third form of Education was introduced on three several occasions, but not as would appear with success. In 1556 it was ordered, that on every day, except those which were mootable or boltable, when supper was done, one appointed by the Utter Barristers was to put three cases at the end of the Barristers' table: one of these cases was to be argued by two Inner Barristers at the least. At dinner every four sitting at one table together were to argue a case put by the puisne of the four. It is hardly conceivable that such a system could be popular or carried out for long. Two attempts were made to enforce the continuance of it, the last in 1576, after which date nothing more is heard of the practice.

It may be noted here, that the Reader of Furnival's Inn had the power to require any Fellow of the Society, either within or without the Bar, to go with him, either in Term or Vacation, to hear the Moot at Furnival's Inn. Probably it was on an occasion of this kind that Thomas Morsse, who had been notified by the Society to communicate instruction after dinner, gave the Fellows opprobrious and presumptuous words, and was very properly fined.
HOUSES OF CHANCERY.

Like the other Inns of Court, Lincoln's Inn had attached to it (to use a neutral phrase) two Houses of Chancery, Davy's or Thavy's Inn, and Furnival's Inn. It is certain that these houses stood in a relation of dependence to the Inn, but the notices in the Black Books do not supply a precise definition of the relation. The former house was bought by Lincoln's Inn in 1551, and the latter in 1548. Up to the date of each purchase, the allusions are few and not pregnant; after the purchases are completed the Houses are termed by the Inn "the proper Housen of this House" and the Inn probably dealt with them as possessions. It is not now possible to distinguish acts done by the Inn by virtue of a right founded on custom or tradition from those which were done by the Inn as owner; nor is it possible to affirm that the relations of the Inn with each House were at all times identical, or that acts submitted to by one House are evidence of a right to do like acts to the other House. With this caution we may turn to the consideration of the notices affecting each House.

Davy's Inn is the first mentioned in the Black Books. In 1482 Veer is admitted to Lincoln's Inn on condition that he cause his brother "who is now at Davy's Inn to be admitted to the Society within three years," This entry, taken with one in the next year of the admission of John Goldwell in consideration that his son of "Stapyll Inn" should also be admitted, shows that the members of a House of Chancery were not bound to seek admission at the Patron Inn, but might choose to which Inn of Court they would be admitted.

The remaining set of entries about Davy's Inn refer to the Readership. The Reader apparently was always a member of Lincoln's Inn. He was elected to his post by the House of Chancery at the suggestion of Lincoln's Inn which held itself in some way responsible for his election. This at least seems to be the meaning of an entry in the accounts of 1528: "£3 6s. 8d. to H. See for his expenses about acquiring the Readership of Davy's Inn."

When elected the Reader remained responsible to Lincoln's Inn who punished him for negligence in his duties, or made him payments on account of his position.

The entries about Furnival's Inn are more numerous. The Reader of Furnival's Inn was a member of Lincoln's Inn: that Society nominating three candidates of its own body, one of whom was elected by Furnival's Inn to fill the Readership. The validity of the election, if challenged, was enquired into by the Society, who, if the election was declared void, sent a list of new candidates from which a Reader could be elected. After his election the Society compelled him to be in Commons at Lincoln's Inn for every week of the term and vacation: and fined him if he surrendered his office without the privity of the Bench. He was authorised to compel any member of the Society to go with him to hear the Moots at Furnival's Inn. Refusal to comply with the Reader's request was followed by a fine. The Readings and Moots at Furnival's Inn were utilized by the Society for the benefit of their own members. On occasions when the Reader was incapacitated or the Readings did not run their full length, Utter Barristers of Lincoln's Inn were allowed to keep their Vacation by exercising learning in the Houses of Chancery, "so that (query, provided that) Readings should be furnished at all the Moots" there. The Reader was the official channel of communication between the Society and the Houses. "Every Reader of Court is to give order to their Houses of Chancery that the orders for apparells and weapons and study gowns be observed by their Companies."* One who had been a Reader in Chancery two years at the least could be admitted to plead at Westminster and subscribe an Action, Bill or Plea.

By 1555 the several Inns of Court had probably established relations with their respective Houses of Chancery on an identical footing: for in that year, the Houses of Chancery combine for their common advantage and present a Bill to all the Inns of Court, requiring that in future none shall be admitted to an Inn of Court, unless he have been a year first at a House of Chancery. The concession of this request would probably have been to the advantage of the Houses: but it might not have been to the interest of the Inns of Court that there should be only one door of admission. Possibly the question of the admission of members of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, while in residence at the Universities, was then in the air, though the admission of a member of the University is not recorded until 1578. The problem was solved in a very modern fashion. In November, 1555, the Society granted the request "so the same was inviolably observed in all other Inns of Court." In little more than a year, admission is offered to him "who will pay for his admittance for not being in Chancery 40s.," and thenceforward a money distinction is preserved in favour of those applying for admission from Davy's Inn or Furnival's Inn, those from the other Houses of Chancery and the outer world paying heavier fines.

The Society intervened when one of its Houses got into difficulties external or internal.

In 1530 Furnival's Inn got into arrear with its rent, and application had to be made for remission of the past rent and reduction of the future to the landlord, the Earl of Shrewsbury. The Society joined in a deputation to his Lordship with the Reader, the Principal and others of the Fellowship, but with what result the text does not state.

Later on, violent disputes broke out between the Principal and Fellows. The Society held an inquiry, apparently of their own motion, and found the Principal to blame. Thereupon they seek the advice of the Master of the Rolls and the Judges how best to remove the Principal "considering the Rules of Furnival's Inn and the challenged authority of this House." Perhaps the authority was successfully challenged, as no reference to any settlement appears in the text.

A dispute is chronicled in which the Society came off victorious. It happened the year after the purchase of the House by the Society. The rent being unpaid, the Principal and the Fellowship were ordered to bring an answer in writing whether they would pay or not. The answer is set out at length in the text and is worth perusal. In effect the defence was that the rent was too high. The reply of the Society is not recorded, but in 1551 a minute directs the arrest of the Principal to answer for the non-payment of the rent and the immediate prosecution of an action against other members of the Inn for trespass. The Treasurer's account in 1551-2 shows a payment of Rent by the House and no more is heard of the dispute.

The overlordship of the Inns of Court was fully recognised in the orders necessary for the government of the Inns of Court of 16 Elizabeth (1574). The ninth order lays down that the "Reformacion and order" for the Inns of Chancery is referred to the Benchers of the Houses of Court to which they are belonging.

There is nothing in this volume to show that in the opinion of the Benchers, "Reformacion or order" was needed in Davy's or Furnival's Inn.

In the Houses of Chancery were Inner Barristers, who were called and became Utter Barristers of their House, having been educated by Readings and Moots. But the Utter Barrister of a House of Chancery was admitted only as an Inner Barrister of an Inn of Court. Incidentally it appears that a proportion worth legislating for of the Clerks of Utter Barristers of Lincoln's Inn were members of the House of Chancery. It might be supposed that the social status of the members of a House of Chancery was inferior to that of Lincoln's Inn of which Barristers' Clerks were not members; but there is no other evidence supporting such a supposition.

CHRISTMASTIDE.

The Vacation from the Vigil of Christmas appears from the earliest entries to have been a season of feasting and amusement. But in 1520, a change was introduced of which the effect cannot now be ascertained. In that year "it is determined by my Masters that the order of Christmas shall be broken up": and from that date onward, the Bench yearly make an order to the effect that "no solemn Christmas be kept." Sometimes a reason is given, that none is kept at the other Inns, or "for all things are very dear," or by reason of the plague. The order provides that those who keep Commons shall have the Christmas counted to them for a Vacation, and makes an allowance for the board of the servants of the Inn, and for special dinners to all in Commons on the three principal feasts and for other matters.

Probably the revels of Christmastide still continued, but with "maimed rites." The Society purchase for the revels on Christmas Day, New Year's Day and Twelfth Day, boars, Gascon wine, Malvesay, wafers, spices, holine, and apparently (a mysterious) "Pescodde." It paid for minstrels and sometimes waytes, carol-singers, or lusores, and authorised the purchase by the Escheator of coals and fuel for consumption in the Kitchen and Hall; the latter probably being the only fire to which many of the Students had access.

To preside over the merrymaking there was a King over Christmas; he had officers and servants with the titles of Marshal, Master of the Revels, Steward for Christmas, Butler for Christmas, Constable Marshal, Server and Cupbearer. The Marshal was a Bencher; the rest, including the King himself, were probably below the Bar. The service of the King was performed with ceremonies, apparently traditional, and of some intricacy.

The Marshal appears first in 1455, in the yearly list of Officers of the Society, and on one occasion, in 1493, held the office of Marshal with that of Treasurer. The post was filled by a Bencher, often with the Readership, as late as 1532. His term of office was from the last week of Michaelmas Term to the first week of Hilary Term, and his duties were mainly to keep order and prevent waste. Keeping order must have been at times a difficult task. "Jake Stray and his adherents" were the cause of breaking the doors of chambers in the Inn, and their conduct was so outrageous that by order of 1579, "they were henceforth utterly banished and no more to be used in Lincoln's Inn." On another occasion the Company, i.e., of revellers, mishandled the Officers of the Inn, and the Marshal the ensuing Christmas is ordered to report how the Company order the said Officers. One Marshal is fined for wasting two hogsheads of wine, and another for excessive expenditure. Others of his duties were connected with the King over Christmas. He had the choosing of the King's Server and Cupbearer. If the King was absent at Christmas the Marshal, with the advice of the Preface.

Utter Bar, named another to occupy the King's post. He himself sat as King on New Year's Day and had like service to that held at Christmas Day "for learning the young gentlemen to do service." The badge of his office was a red gown which he was compelled to wear on Christmas Day and Hallowmas from the beginning of dinner "till they go to supper." Either to pay for or in addition to the gown, the Society granted him as far back as 1466, 6s. 8d. for his term of office. Later he was allowed five marks for his expenses and apparels in Hall, and had to pay any excess out of his own pocket. Subsequently he was granted one admission, a privilege he seems to have exercised on Christmas day, 1512. The fine for refusal to serve or being discharged of the office was £8 to £10.

The Master of the Revels was from below the Bar, but was probably elected by the Bench. He, like the Marshal, first appears in the list of officers in 1455. A holder of the office, Fitz, was put out of the Society for not obeying the order of one of the Benchers after the Revels, and refusing to obey with contemptuous words as was testified by "divers seniors" of the Society. The presence of "divers seniors" seems to imply something in the nature of an assembly, and the entry in the next year, that Fitz and four others pay a fine for pulling down the Hall may throw light on the real nature of the offence of Fitz. On New Year's Day the Master of the Revels took, during dinner time, the post of Marshal who for that purpose sat as King.

The Steward for Christmas was probably an Utter Barrister. He was not allowed to expend more than 26s. 8d. in his office; and the refusal to serve was punished by a fine of the like amount.

The Butler for Christmas also was an Utter Barrister, and a fine of 53s. 4d. was paid on admission to the Bench without serving the office. The charge of the wine and keeping order under the Marshal appear to have been his duties.

The Constable Marshal is mentioned only three times; once to record that 53s. 4d. was the fine for refusing to serve the office. A Constable's Court is mentioned in connection with some illicit Revels held in Vacation, and it is probable that the Constable Marshal was connected with the King's Court of Justice.

The ordinary rules of discipline were relaxed on Christmas day. Drinking was allowed at the Buttery. Cards and dice were allowed to be used in the Hall, much to the Butler's profit, who was compensated for his loss, when Christmas was not kept.

On Innocents' Day (Dec. 28), the King of Cokneys or Cokkeneyes sat as King with his Marshal, Butler, Constable Marshal and had due service. He and all his officers are enjoined to use honest manners and good order without any waste or destruction making in wine, brawn, "chely" or other victuals. He had on one occasion an allowance of 9d. from the Society.

The Feast of the Purification (Feb. 2nd) was the day of important Revels known as the Post Revels. The main entertainment on this day was the performance of plays, sometimes by the children of the Queen's Chapel pp. 344, or the players of Lord Roche, or music performed by a band of musicians 352,374, hired for the occasion, or sometimes by the minstrels attached to the Inn. 418

In 1568, "the Honorable Earl of Rutland," supped with the Society, and 13s. 4d. is charged for musicians who played before him, and "£3 6s. 8d. for victuals for many gentlemen of the Middle Temple who came here to dance the Post Revels with gentlemen of this Inn."

REVELS.

Besides the Revels at Christmas and the Purification or Candlemas, others were held by the Society on St. Arkenewold's Day (April 30th), Midsummer Day, some day in the Autumn Vacation, some day between November 2nd and November 20th (probably Nov. 17th, St. Hugh's Day), known as Post Revels within the Term, Easter, Pentecost, and Trinity Sunday. Attendance at the Revels was apparently compulsory. Singing pp. 291, mockingly or irreverently or "excesse" crying and shouting were punished 329 by fine, and the doers of an extraordinary act, taking down the light of St. John, and hanging instead thereof "a horsehede in despite of the Saint," p. 273 were very severely punished.

Music played a considerable part in these Revels; on Christmas Day, the eve of Candlemas and Allhallows, and at noon and night on the two latter festivals, performances were given by bands of musicians hired for the purpose, or by the minstrels attached to the Inn.

FINANCE.

The financial dealings of the Society are shown by the accounts which appear in the Black Book every year. They were stated for the twelve months beginning on Michaelmas Day up to 1504, and on All Saints' Day, 1505, and succeeding years. The Steward and the Pensioner render separate accounts, the balances on each being carried into the Treasurer's account, which contains his receipts and payments on behalf of the Society.
In these are included the total of all Building accounts (one of which is set out at length in the Appendix) and every fine inflicted by the Society with a statement of the cause of the fine.

The permanent income of the Society was derived from five sources. (1) The pension of 12d. a term, raised in 1463 to 16d. a term, from every Fellow of the Society. (2) The profits on Commons, when there were any, which was not usually the case. (3) The sums payable on admissions to the Society and to Chambers. (4) Fines. The records of these are probably the most numerous entries in the volume. Fines were inflicted for every breach of regulations or discipline at the Bench, at or below the Bar, for admission to the Society, for admission to Chambers, for dispensation from the rules or offices of the Society, for leave to leave the Society; and on a scale that would have been unendurable if the burden of fines had not fallen on all alike, and the proceeds had not been devoted to the common good. (5) Balances on sums collected for various purposes. Jousts were held on some public occasion, as the coronation of Anne Boleyn, and money was collected to an amount considerably exceeding the cost of the scaffolding erected for the convenience of Fellows; the excess went to the coffers of the Society. In the same way a subscription was collected from each Fellow below the Bench to defray the benevolence or regard presented by the Society to each member of its body who proceeded to the dignity of Serjeant-at-Law; the regard in one case is half the sum collected, and the balance is paid to the general fund. (6) Presents. The Bishop of Chichester presents the amount due to him for rent for rebuilding the Hall. Sir Thomas Lovell presents a considerable sum towards the erection of the Gate-House still standing in Chancery Lane.

When money was required for building, it was raised sometimes by a general "whip" all round, and on other occasions by loans from members of the Society on the invitation of the Bench.

On one occasion the Governors appear to have applied the moneys of the Inn to a strange purpose. In the 10th of Elizabeth a great lottery was held in the City of London, every lot being 10s. The gentlemen of Lincoln's Inn, Furnival's Inn, and Davy's Inn "pooled" their subscriptions, which, at 10s. a lot, ought to have amounted to the round sum of £30, but in fact fell short by 28s. 4d., which was contributed by the Governors out of the funds of the Inn. The speculation was not successful, as the winnings only realised on division 4s. 3d. per lot. This was duly received for the Inn by Mr. Wylbraham, Recorder of London, and paid by him to Mr. Wetherell, "Treasurer of this House, who is appointed by the Masters of this Benche to deliver unto every man his due portion of his lot so put into the said lottery."
Up to 1578 the Treasure of the Society was left in the hands of the Treasurer, who gave security for it. But in that year, on the suggestion of the Treasurer, the balance in hand was distributed among various members of the Society on loan until occasion arose for the use of it, a practice which seems to have been continued.

IRISHMEN.

One class of men incurred the hostility of the Society at a very early date. Under 1437 is recorded an extraordinary minute, that no person born in Ireland be admitted in future a Fellow of the Society: any born there, if thereafter admitted to be expelled, "so that no Irishman may be held or named as a Fellow of the Society in future." No reason is given for this order. However, the admission of Blonket from the "country of Ireland" in 1452-3 shows that the objection was to Irishmen as a class and not to individuals: and his admission is followed by the admission at intervals of at least five other gentlemen, all "of Ireland." But in 1513 the order of exclusion is revived in a modified form, that a Bencher must assent to the admission, and the person admitted should be at the Master's Commons. This order entailed on the new Fellow payment on a higher scale for Commons: but on the other hand his company would consist of older men less likely to give or take offence. Irishmen must have continued to get admitted, but the objection to them gained in strength: for in 1542 no more Irishmen are allowed admission until there should be only three in the Inn and after that no more than four at one time are to be members. The next entry appears in the Treasurer's accounts for the 1 & 2 Philip and Mary, "Tenpence for a lock and staples to shut the door of the Irishmen." Perhaps in connection with this purchase, it is ordered in the next year that "gentlemen of Ireland shall not be admitted into any Chamber in this House other than into that which is called the Dovehouse." Those English in the Dovehouse were to go out et e converso and no more Irishmen than four to be members at one time. Ten years later "the Irishmen's chamber called the Dovecote" is rebuilt, and for all that appears the Irishmen occupy the new building.

During the period covered by this volume, the Society on four occasions came into contact or collision with external authority, and the conduct of the Society on each occasion is worthy of notice.

In 1467, Edward IV. commanded the four Inns, that each Inn should order four men of the Inn to attend him armed at the time of certain feats of arms at Smithfield; "which order" states the minute "was rashly agreed to by both the Temples against our wish and consent, but afterwards agreed to by all."

On another occasion the Society appear to have asserted their independence of control by the Judges in matters outside the jurisdiction of the Courts. The story, too long to tell here, will be found under the years 1554, 1555, 1556 and 1559, and is shortly this: The propriety of wearing of beards by the Fellows of the Society had been for some years in controversy between, at Lincoln's Inn, the Bench and the rest of the Society. The Judges had interfered with an order for shaving, which the four Inns had quickly superseded by an order of their own to a like effect. But in 1559 the Judges summoned the Bench and Bar of the Houses of Court before them and had order taken and charge given for certain orders to be observed, one of which was that no Fellow of the House should wear a beard of above a fortnight's growth. The Bench appear to have been so much impressed by this proceeding, that they made an order, affixing a fine to a breach of the Judges' order. This happened on November 2nd; but by the 27th November, bolder counsels prevailed, and a minute is passed that "all orders heretofore made in this House touching beards shall be void and repealed." Thus the Bench refused to carry out the order of the Justices, and as nothing more is heard of the matter, it may be presumed the Judges acquiesced in the determination of the Bench.

When, however, the Privy Council signify the Queen's Command, the Bench are prompt to carry out the order. In obedience to an order of the Privy Council in 1569 they expel certain of the Fellows, and again, when the Privy Council make orders limiting the numbers of the Society, the Bench at once takes steps to carry out the orders.

The unhealthy condition of London between 1422 and 1584 is strikingly shown by the frequent mention of the plague. In 25 of those 162 years, the plague interferes with the orderly life of the Society. Generally it makes its appearance in the summer or autumn, and the Vacation is suspended. All the Masters fly for periods of three, six, or eight weeks, and the Steward's accounts state that commons were dissolved. In 1543 a great plague is recorded as lasting all summer until All Saint's. Michaelmas Term is kept at St. Alban's and all business is postponed until Hilary Term. Again, no one is in Commons from June 24th, 1563, to April 24th, 1564, and no entry is made in the Black Book between those dates. The sweating sickness is stated to have prevailed with the plague in 1516.

Scarcity of bread causes the Commons to be raised in 1528. They are lowered in 1546, but in 1550 dearness of victual begins in May and still continues in November, 1551. "Bread is dearer and of greater price than it hath been" in 1566.

Two official statements of the members of the Inn during this period are shewn in App. VII. and X. Though one Statement is dated in 1573 and the other in 1583, the figures contained in them may be combined, and the results accepted without fear of great error. On this basis it appears, that towards the end of the 16th century Lincoln's Inn had 104 chambers, inhabited in term time by 13 Benchers, and Associates of the Bench, about 50 Utter Barristers and 120 men below the Bar. If each Bencher had his due of a chamber to himself, the other members of the Inn would on an average be two to every chamber: and this result agrees with the casual notices in the text. Other memoranda printed in the State Papers, Domestic, Elizabeth Vol. XCV. give somewhat different numbers, and we must rest content with something short of absolute accuracy.

It is disappointing not to find in these Black Books any clue to the origin of the Society or to the date of its birth. But the Books do contain sufficient to show that the Society may be credited with an origin and a quasi corporate existence of a much earlier date than 1422.

In that year it describes itself in the heading of the Black Book, and in 1427 in the heading of the "dues" Bond by its present name: and in 1437 40s. is paid to Hallsewelle in the name of the Society "for the farm of Lyncollysyn." These phrases all point to the Society having acquired a right to use a corporate name, or at any rate an acquiescence in the use of a corporate name by those with whom it was brought into contact. It is not necessary here to repeat the arguments in the Preface to The Admissions, demonstrating that the members mentioned in the earliest lists of the Black Books were not the first members of the Society, for there is other evidence which may be shortly mentioned.

This is the fact that the records show no organic constitutional changes during the whole period covered by this volume. The system of government remains unaltered; admissions are made more regular, education more effective, but the changes are slight, so that it is possible from the casual notices to say that the constitution which existed in 1422 was in force in 1586. It is safe to infer that so early as the former year the constitution had become well suited to the wants of the Society, and that this completeness had been the growth of many years of use and wont.

This conclusion is further supported by the body of customs which had grown up in the Society. Some of these are specifically referred to in the text: such as the custom of the Society to pay to each newly-elected Serjeant from their body 10 marks: and the custom to collect for this payment 3s. 4d. from each Fellow of the Society, the Bench not contributing. But that there were others of which no record exists cannot be doubted. It is certainly remarkable that the Society was at the period under consideration still a Customary Society, that is, one which had not (and indeed never has) reached the stage, when customs crystallise into statutes or a code of rules. Its history, like that of the other Inns, presents a marked contrast to that of the Universities of Bologna, Paris and Oxford, each of which, at a comparatively early stage, embodied their customs in the shape of statutes, dealing more or less minutely with all the details of University life. Obedience to these statutes was enforced by an oath; and an oath was, as we have seen, exacted from each member of Lincoln’s Inn; but this runs, to be “obediens, assistans et consortans to the Governors in all things concerning the Society.” The breach of such an oath was held to be perjury and mortal sin, and exposed the disobedient to Spiritual penalties and proceedings in saltem animae. It is therefore a surprise to find a body of lawyers, by training cautious and wary, apparently pledging themselves in blank at the risk of such a punishment. The explanation probably is that by the time the oath was instituted, a body of customs had grown up, so comprehensive and established, that the action of the Governors was confined within well-known limits, and the measure of the Fellows' obedience was not, as at first sight appears, the uncontrolled will of the Governors.

A glimpse of such a custom is given by an entry already cited, that “Pulleyn is put out of Commons for refusing to carry the body of Saxby to the grave, as ordered by divers of the Bench.” This at once suggests a custom that members should take part in the funeral rites of deceased members of the Society; a last service, obtaining in the religious and craft guilds of the middle ages, and which is perhaps more to the point in another seminary of learning, to which Lincoln’s Inn is possibly indebted for this and other forms, the University of Paris.

Here then we have a custom of which no record would have been left, had not a breach of it been committed, and we can only guess what has been lost, because the customs of Lincoln's Inn were not embodied in a statute.

The tradition that the Inns of Court were originally Hostels or Halls rented by Associations of Apprenticii ad legem gets some support from the text. If the founders of such an Association reserved the right of government to themselves and those co-opted by them, we may see in the gubernatores, the successors in office of the original founders, though the reason for the distinction between them and the co-opted Bench had ceased to exist.

Whether the true view be that the Apprentices founded the Society with a view to mutual protection and to teaching law—or that the development of the Society into a teaching and degree-giving body was an unforeseen consequence of association cannot be discussed at length here.

It is of course probable that the Apprentices, being the lower order of the body of advocates would naturally be at issue on some points of professional interest with the Serjeants, the higher body; and perhaps traces of this feeling are to be found in the custom, but lately extinct, of "tolling" a newly-elected Serjeant out of Lincoln's Inn by ringing the chapel bell—a half humorous, half serious reminder that thence-forward he was dead to the interests of the Society. So, too, the regards and benevolences subscribed by the Fellows below the Bench may perhaps be considered propitiatory offerings rather than parting gifts. Still it should be added, that whatever the corporate feeling may have been, the Bench did on two occasions, both of importance, call in Serjeants who had been Fellows of the Society to assist in their deliberations.

But a few words may convey the impression left by a study of the text. The fact that a full member of the Society is styled Magister shows that each Founder, to whom the right to use such a style must be traced, was alike a Master, and, as such, exercised the well recognised Master's* right to train pupils and admit them to the order of Masters, with the consent of the Masters' Guild, if it existed. Further, it is probable, if reliance may be placed on the analogous practice at the Bar at Paris, the Master testified to the attainments of his pupils being such as to entitle them to be

* It may be asked how the Apprenticii could be Magistri; for the former term is equivalent to that of Bachelor, meaning an assistant qualified to teach up to a certain point—a pupil-teacher. Probably the answer is that the Apprentice was Magister before he was an apprentice; that he was apprentice quoad a Serjeant-at-law, but still a Magister.
admitted to audience at the Bar of the Court. A number of such Masters of the Law, drawn by the ties of a common profession to live together in London, each of whom took pupils whom he housed, educated, and controlled, would tend to assume a quasi-corporate form. Thus originated the Society of Lincoln's Inn; a body of Masters of the Faculty of Law, giving lectures and instructing their pupils in law; and when satisfied of the proficiency of their pupils, admitting them to the order of Masters by calling them to the Bar; and further, as has been noted above, enforcing on the newly called an inceptio after the fashion of the great mediæval Universities. It becomes at any rate possible to understand how Fortescue, Coke and Selden speak of the Inns of Court as Universities for the Study of the Law on the same footing as the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge.

The text fails to inform us on points of interest. Was the educational course supplemented by anything like reading in Chambers? There is no allusion to such a practice. How and when did the Courts begin to recognise the qualification of a Barrister of the Inn to practice before them? And why did the appellation of Barrister entirely supersede that of Apprentice?

These and other questions relating to the early history of the Bar do not find a solution in the pages of the text, and do not therefore come within the scope of this Preface; which has fulfilled its purpose if it succeeds in drawing attention to the more interesting portions of a unique Record.

Mr. W. P. Baildon, F.S.A., a Fellow of the Society, has at the request of the Bench prepared the text of this Volume, and added an Index on the lines of those of recent Publications of this nature. His suggestions have added to the accuracy of this Preface.

Lincoln's Inn,
November, 1897.
The first Black Book is a small volume of 180 folios, with part of another folio remaining at the end, and five folios at the beginning not numbered. These first five leaves contain a rough index of subjects.

A list of names without date, headed "Manuceptores." This list is printed in the first volume of admissions. (See introduction to Vol. 1 of Admission Register, and compare with fo. 13 below.)

John Speke, John Fortescu, junior, Robert Danvers, John Stafford, John Fitz and John Forster, sureties for John Bate, Steward.

A list of 31 names headed "Ceux sont les nouns de ceux qe fuerunt assignes de continuer yci le nowel, l'an primer H. vj."

Similar lists occur all through the volume; they refer to the custom of keeping vacations. There were three Vacations in the year, namely, Easter, Autumn or Michaelmas, and Christmas.

This list refers to Christmas, and to each name is is added "pur soun primer," "seconde," or "terce nowelle," as the case may be. The fine for not keeping a vacation varied from time to time; in 2 Henry VI. it was 40d., in 3 Henry VI. 20s., 11 Hen. VI.—6s. 8d.
These are the names of those who were assigned to have the governance of this Inn for the whole of the third year of King Henry VI., 1424-5:

- Rye, Crakenthorpe,
- Symonde, [John], Fortescu, junior, [John],
- Gilbarde, Scheffelde, [Robert].

Governors, 4 Henry VI., 1425-6:

- Pek, Fortescu, junior, [John],
- Hampden, Sheffelde, [Robert],
- Sperlyng, [Andrew].

Governors, 6 Henry VI., 1427-8:

- Sheffield, [Robert], Danvers, [Robert],
- Speke, [John], Fitz, [John].

John Stafford delivered seven marks, collected by him, to the above-mentioned persons, which they paid to Philip Pursser, the brewer, on S. Andrew's day [Nov. 30], 6 Henry VI., 1427, in full payment of 105s. due to him for the whole time of Henry Lynde, the late Steward.

“Lyncolnesyn.”

The mainprise [manuaptio] of the Fellows of the Inn, as well for the faithful payment of their dues and payments in any way concerning the Society of the Inn, as well as for continuation, and all other burdens, according to the ordinance of the said Society due to be done and supported, taken there before Robert Scheffelde, John Speke, John Fitz, Robert Danvers and Nicholas Sibile, then Pensioner [Pens'], deputed and assigned by the said Society to make mainprise of this kind according to the form of an ordinance made to that effect by the common assent of the said Society, from Michaelmas, 6 Henry VI. [1427] to the same feast next following.

Then follows a long list of 187 names in this form:

Alcestre pro quo Somerton.

It is ordained by the Society, February 9th, 6 Henry VI., that residents in the City of London and Middlesex who are [members] of the Society, may be for a whole year at repasts, so that they are prepared for all summons of the Society, especially within twelve days of Christmas, and that they pay commons for two weeks in Lent, that is to say, at Palm Sunday and Easter week (unless they have previously continued personally for two weeks of Lent), and for three weeks in autumn, to wit, the last before the octave of Michaelmas (unless they have previously continued personally in the same for three whole weeks).

Governors, 7 Henry VI., 1428-9:—

Fortescue, [John],
Fitz, [John],
Speke, [John],
Stafford, [John].

Auditors [Auditores] this year:—

John Lake,
Robert Danvers.

Memorandum that in the vigil of S. Hugh it was considered by the Society that Robert Baynard for disobedience and default in mooting and in the collection of money for fuel, etc., be expelled from the Society, and be not again held, named or admitted of the Society; and that all his goods within the Society be seised, etc., until, etc. [sic.]

Dec. 1. — Hamo Askham admitted that he owed the Society 50s. ; this was done before the auditors in the Chapel.

Dec. 1, 1428. John Fitz rendered an account of divers receipts for "Chapell Syluer," on which account he owed the Society 17s. 4d., of which sum he paid 6s. 8d. to Robert Hyllyng, late Clerk of the Buttery. The remaining 10s. 8d. he paid to the Society in the Chapel, 17 Henry VI., 1438-9.

Dec. 1, 1428.—John Speke* charged himself with £6 4s. 11½d. fo. 18. which he received from Robert Sheffield.† He craves allowance of 20s. paid to Robert, the clerk of John Presfen, the attorney of Tonard the baker; and of 12s. paid for 'Savse' to Trottle living at Fletebrig, in arrear for the time of Henry Lynde, the late Steward; and of 17s. 8½d. paid for three table-cloths [pro iij mappis] for the Hall in Michaelmas Term, 6 Henry VI., 1427; and of 3s. 4d. for mats [pro mattis] in the same year. The residue, £3 11s. 11d., was paid to Robert Danvers, who paid out of it 13s. 10d. to Hamme the baker, in full satisfaction of an old debt of 13s. 4d., to wit, by a tally broken before them.

John Stafford, late Pensioner, paid to Robert Danvers 33s. 4d., the balance of his account.

S. Katherine's day [Nov. 25], 9 Henry VI., 1430. Adam Sammaster, late Pensioner, paid to John Symond £10 13s. 4d. for the balance of his account.

* It is not clear what office he held, but it was perhaps analogous to that of Treasurer. He was one of the Governors, see ante.
† One of the Governors for the previous year.
On the same day, John Fortescu, late Pensioner, paid £7 for balance of his account.

1433 Sunday after Purification, Feb. 2, 11 Henry VI., John Stafford, Pensioner for 10 Henry VI., 1431-2, paid to John Symond, Recorder of London, in the presence of Richard Pekke, John Hamden, John Fitz, Richard Walsh* and Thomas Mareschall, the Pensioner, as the overplus of his account of the pension collected by him, £4, which John Symond then and there paid to the brewer, together with 43s. 9d. collected by him from divers Fellows for arrears of commons.

1429-30 Governors, 18 Henry VI., 1429-30:

[In another hand]. This security was taken on Wednesday before S. Peter's day, 15 Henry VI. [1437].

This appears to mean that the manucaption was taken again at that time. In this list a good many alterations have been made, additional names written, and "mort" written to some names, in a lighter coloured ink.

A list of 167 names, with their manucaptors, follows.

Governors, 13 Henry VI., 1434-5:—

Sibyle, Bolney, Marsschall, Boeff.

Governors, 14 Henry VI., 1435-6:—

Mention is made of the arrears due to the Society for the time of William Bretton, late Steward, and also for the time of Robert Hyllyng, late Steward, and also for the times of other former Stewards, who are not named.

March 15th, 15 Henry VI., 1437:

Richard Wode has 39s. of the Society’s money in his hands, which he received from Robert Hewurth, late Pensioner of the Society.

Thomas Marshal has 32s. 9d. of the Society’s money in his hands, beyond 6s. 8d. delivered to William Beoff, which he received from Richard at Wode, late Pensioner of the Society; which sum he paid to John Fortescu in the Chapel in the presence of the Society, July 2nd, 1437.

Robert Hewurth has 18s. and more of the balance of the accounts of Thomas Marchal, late Pensioner, and 10\(\frac{1}{2}\)d. balance from Nicholas Sibile.

1438 William Boef paid on Feb. 8th, 1438, 13s. 4d. for two discontinuances of Tretrap, who is dead.

1437 November 4th, 16 Henry VI., 1437:—

It was ordered that no person born in Ireland should in future be admitted as a Fellow of the Society of 'Lyncollysyn'; and if any one born there shall hereafter be admitted by any person or persons, he shall be expelled, such admission notwithstanding; so that no Irishman may be held or named as a Fellow of the Society in future.

The same day it is ordered and agreed that Robert Danvers shall be at repasts [ad repasta] for the space of one year, and beyond that at his own wish.

Auditors of the account of Bartholomew Bolney, Pensioner, 15 Henry VI., 1436-7:—

Richard Wode, William Jenney.

The keys of the Treasury were in the hands of Fortescu, Heyworth and Marschall, who delivered them to the Society Feb. 8th, 16 Henry VI., 1437, and they were delivered to Fortescu, Sheffield and Boeff. These delivered them up on July 16th following, when two keys were given to Stafford and Heywourth, and the third to Thomas Marsshall.

1437-8 In the vigil of the Apostles Peter and Paul, 16 Henry VI., 1438, John Row delivered to John Fortescu and others in the name of the Society to be paid to * Halssewylle for the farm of "Lyncollysyn" in arrear for the 15th year [Henry VI., 1436-7] in the time of Bartholomew Bolney, then Pensioner, in full payment, 40s., out of moneys received by him.

On the octave of the Purification of Blessed Mary, 18 Henry VI., 1439-40:—

William Perkyns was pardoned all his pension in arrear up to Easter next, for the sum of 33s. 4d., which he paid to Richard Illyngworth, the Pensioner; and so William is quit of all arrears of pensions, and also of all other dues and burdens due to the Society, and in future he shall be admitted to repasts.

The said Richard [Illyngworth] is here discharged thereof, since he was charged in the accounts for his term of office as Pensioner.

First, that every person hereafter admitted as fellow or clerk [in socium sive clericum] into the Society, shall, on his entrance, take an oath upon the Holy Gospels, which oath is contained in the great book of Orders.* And further, within the time limited he shall find two sureties [manuceptores], of whom one shall be a continuator, for the payment of dues and charges to the Inn. And he who makes instance for the admittance of a fellow or clerk of this kind shall see that those so admitted do, within a month after their admission, find sufficient security for the payment of all dues and charges, and he shall also satisfy and pay all the dues and charges in the mean time, until the said admission.

Item. That every fellow of Lincoln's Inn shall find anew two sureties, of whom one shall be a continuator for the greater part, &c.

April 20, 20 Henry VI. :-It is ordained by the Governors aforesaid that everyone who shall hereafter be admitted to the Society shall continue every year, for the three years next after his admission, as follows, namely, from the vigil of Christmas to the morrow of the Epiphany, from the vigil of Palm Sunday for three weeks following, and for the two weeks next before Michaelmas and the week after the same feast, and this under a penalty of 20s. for each default. And every person who has already been admitted but has not continued for three years before this ordinance, according to custom, shall continue the remainder [of his three years] in form aforesaid and under the penalty aforesaid.

The other ordinances of the same Governors appear in the other Black Book of manuceptors. [Probably Black Book 1.]

July 12, 1442.—£6 was paid from the Treasury to the brewer nineteen barrels according to a tally of Robert Duke, the Steward, whereof 32 barrels are withdrawn [?; extranuntur], and so 47 barrels remain on the tally; which £6 are to be received from the roll of the said Steward and to be replaced in the Treasury.

Before the residue be paid, let it be seen whether any barrels were disallowed in the pantry-book, or if any were sent back.

The Governors delivered out of the Treasury two writings obligatory, containing 20 marks, made by W. Taverner, a Fellow of the Society of Lincoln’s Inn, for the security of two acquittances for the farm of Lincoln’s Inn in the 19th and 20th years of Henry VI., which two acquittances were received by the said Governors and remain in the Treasury.

* Book II., Part 1. The paper is considerably larger than that of Book I.

Richard Drax was allowed out of his commons by Thomas B.B.I., Marshall, Robert Heyword, and Bartholomew Bolne, then pt. 1, Governors, 4s. 1d., which he paid on the Sunday before fo. 18. S. George's day, in the time of Robert Duke, the Steward, for bread, which he bought because the Steward was then absent and there was no bread in the pantry for dinner; which sum the Steward shall be allowed in his accounts for that week.

Nicholas Rypynghale was allowed out of his commons put in the abstracts in the time of Robert Duke and there specified, 10s. 7d. which he paid in the fourth week of Lent, 20 Henry VI., for a drinking [potatio] with Bartholomew Bolne, according to use and custom and by the precept and command of Thomas Marshall and his fellows, then Governors, because the said Robert Duke, then the Steward, would not make [the payment], but refused altogether to do so; and which 10s. 7d. the said Robert Duke levied from the Fellows of the Society.*

It is considered by the Governors that Nicholas Rypynghale shall be allowed the said 10s. 7d. out of his commons put in the abstracts of the said Robert Duke and now in Rypynghale's hands, and on his accounts of the said abstracts he shall be exonerated and quit of the said 10s. 7d.

Governors, 23 Henry VI., 1444-5:— 1444-5
Thomas Marshall, Nicholas Rippynghale, fo. 58.
John Jenney, junior, William Moile.

Pensioner: Thomas Stodevyle. Vacated because absent, certain weighty matters moving the Governors; elected in his place, John Bekeswell.

"Colegaderer": Sharppe.
Collector of Chapel money: Rypplyngham.

William Jenney delivered to the new Governors a paper, the account of William Herfrey, the late Steward; and because William Jenney and the Governors are in controversy as to some of the allowances claimed in the account and the account is contradictory [contrarium], therefore it remains undiscussed, and is remitted to the discretion of the Society; and the account, under the seal of the said William, is delivered to the new Governors for the 24th year.

At the special instance of John Fortescu, Chief Justice [of the King's Bench] Robert Aspare and John Poynes are admitted to repasts, etc., when the said Justice shall be present.

[Aspare's name is struck out, and a note added to the effect that it was done because he was excused from attending repasts (pardonatur ad repast') generally on his admission. He had been admitted 21 Henry VI., [fo. 43.]; a note is added to his name to the effect that he was excused from attending repasts (pardonatur ad repast') at the special instance of the Chief Justice, but not from keeping vacations, except when riding out of town ( nisi fuerit equitando extra villam) with the said Chief Justice.]

Rippynghale junior was admitted by the Governors to repasts [repasta] without any continuation, for certain special causes.

Richard Castell, late Steward, mentioned.
John Dallegood, late Steward, mentioned.
John Lygh, late Steward, mentioned.

The little Black Book* mentioned as containing the arrears of John Lygh's last account.

* Apparently a volume now lost.
Nicholas Repynghale had an allowance made on his accounts of 4d. for cutting out the vanes for the Chapel [? ; pro cindicione venearum Capelle.]

William Moile had an allowance on his accounts for 26s. 8d. paid for companies of minstrels [pro sociis histreonibus] at Christmas last; also for 8s. paid by him in part payment of one "Ogeshede" of red wine for the same feast beyond what was paid by the Fellows then present; also for 10s. which he paid to Thomas Maschall for the residue of the payment for the "skafoldys in Smythfeld" in the same year.

Whereas John Dalagode, the late Steward, is charged in his account to the brewer with £6 18s. 9d. for 37 barrels of beer, as appears by the counterfoil of the tally, and on the stock of the tally there are 39 barrels, which leaves two barrels beyond the account, in regard to which there is a dispute between John and the brewer, the matter is remitted to the discretion of the Society.

1445-6 Governors, 24 Henry VI., 1445-6:
  - Robert Heywurth,
  - Nicholas Sibile,
  - Bartholomew Bolney,
  - Thomas Stotevile.
Pensioner: Thomas Replyngham.
"Colgaderer" : Wykys.

Sunday before S. Valentine's day, 1446.
Henry Chevele was allowed 20s. for a boar for Christmas last, on the tally made with the brewer, William Barret, and 16s. 1d. for badly brewed ale [? ; pro servicia male br'].
Henry Cheuele, the Steward, was paid 33s. 4d. for the minstrels [pro histrionibus] this year.
Seventeen barrels of beer, price £3 3s. 9d., are in dispute on the brewer's tally.

Memorandum that Bartholomew Bolneye, Robert Heyworth, Nicholas Sibile and Thomas Stotevile, Governors of the Society of Lincoln's Inn, 24 Henry VI., in the name of the Society have granted and to farm let to Richard Benet, the Cook of the said Inn, the long garden of the Inn,* from Michaelmas, 24 Henry VI. [1445], for ten years, to have, hold and occupy the said garden with all profits of herbs; all fruits, to wit, apples, pears, divers kinds of nuts, and plums, being reserved to the Society; he finding all herbs required by the Inn, and paying yearly 13s. 4d. at Easter and Michaelmas by equal portions. Richard may make a gate in the garden wall, at his own charges, by which a cart may enter with dung for the manuring of the garden.

235. 4d. paid to the baker, that is, Thomas Baker, the one-eyed man [monoculo] without the Bar. *

Memorandum that Cheuele, the late Steward, was admitted into the Society because he had been Steward for a very long time; therefore, by the consideration of the Society, he is admitted to repasts as often as his master shall be in London in term, that is, when the Court is sitting, and in vacations he must be a continuer. †

Governors, 34 Henry VI, 1455-6:—
Robert Heyworth, Fulbery, [Robert]
William Jenney, Girton. 1455-6
Pensioner: Statham.
Clerk of the Chapel: Griffyth.
Master of the Revels: Griffyth.
Coal Gatherer [collector pro focale]: Bulman junior.

Alphay was admitted on the Sunday before the feast of fo. 99.
S. Edmund the King [Nov. 20], 35 Henry VI. [1456], and was pardoned three vacations, he was to pay a doe in winter and a buck in summer or autumn for each of the three that he did not keep.

Memorandum that in the beginning of the year in which William Jenney and his fellows were elected Governors a Treasurer of the Inn was elected by the Society, to wit, Thomas Vmfrey was elected to that office, to receive all receipts at the Treasury, and the charge of discontinuances, and all other things of this kind;
on account of which William Jenney and his fellows have received nothing and owe nothing to be accounted for to the Society, but the said Thomas by the consideration of the whole Society must account therefor.*

1456-7 Governors, 35 Henry VI., 1456-7 :— fo. 100.
Thomas Stodeville, Nicholas Statum,
Thomas Rypplyngham, Richard Yaxlay.
Treasurer: [Thomas] Vmfray.
Master of the Revels: Hudisfeld.
Coal Gatherer [collector focalis]: Trauers.

B B. I., Stodeville, one of the Governors, received 40s. which the fo. 100. said Thomas paid to the vintner "del belle in Fletestrete," by the hand of Thomas Asper, for a pipe of wine for use at Christmas, anno 35 [1456].

Bathe junior, from Ireland, was admitted, for which he gave the Society a gradale†; he will continue all his vacations.

fo. 101. Henry Cheveley, the Steward, mentioned, and other former Stewards, viz.—Ive, Myldehale, Andyrby, Moyle, Andrew, Floyer, Illerysdon, and Richard Castell.

The Treasurer is to levy 6s. 8d. for each discontinuance in Easter and autumn, anno 33, and Easter, autumn and Christmas, anno 34. Sum of all the said discontinuances, 100s.; the names appear in the great Black Book.‡

The Governors delivered to Thomas Vmfrey the names of those who had been fined for their vacations before the 35th year, and have not paid, as appears by the said great Black Book. Sum, £4 13s. 4d.

The Governors also delivered to him the names of those who were in arrear with the fines for the assignments of the new chambers which were assigned before the feast of All Saints in the 35th year, as appears by the said great Black Book. Sum, £4.*

* A Treasurer has been mentioned before, (p. 25), but this is the first record of the appointment of a Treasurer by the Society.

Nicholas Stathum, the Pensioner, 34 Henry VI, accounted fo. 102. before Robert Fulbery and Richard Yaxlee, his auditors, and making due allowances, it appeared by his account that he owed the Society 51s. 8d.; whereof he is pardoned 11s. 8d., because his purse was feloniously cut in the King’s Bench with 20s. of the Society's money in it,† part of the said sum of 51s. 8d.; and so he owed the Society 40s., which he paid to Thomas Vmfrey, the Treasurer, in the presence of the Governors.

Afterwards the said Roll‡ was found and examined by the auditors, and it appeared from the said Roll that the account was in arrear 34s. beyond the 51s. 8d.; which sum Stathum paid to John Asplon, the now Pensioner, who paid it to the Treasurer.

Thomas Vmfrey, the Treasurer, rendered his accounts, and was in surplusage £20 15s. 1½d., [no details are given], which the Society paid to him.

There remains in the hands of the Treasurer a roll of 20d. levied and to be levied from each fellow of the Society for the new building.

Memorandum, to confer with the executors of John Gargrave as to his commons and pension in arrear to the amount of 5 marks.

Mem: delivered to Thomas Vmfrey, Treasurer, a roll of assignments of the new chambers both ground and upper floors [de novis cameris bassis et superiis], which were not assigned before his last account in the preceding year, namely, twelve assignments.§

Mem: Robert Folbery was examined in the presence of the Society touching 40s. which was required of him for the time when he was Pensioner, which he had retained in his hands, and which he ought to have paid to Master Thomas Hanwell for the farm of Lincoln’s Inn; he confessed that of the 40s. he had but 13s. 4d., and that the residue was in the hands of Alvery Mauleverer for the repair of his chamber. It was ordered by the Society, Thomas Stodeville and his fellows then being Governors, that they should receive the 13s. 4d. from Robert [Folbery], (which Thomas Stoteville received), and that the residue be made up by the assignment of the said chamber and the sale of a certain study [studium] therein.*

Sylyard bought the study for 8s., which he paid to the Treasurer.

The 13s. 4d. received from Folbery, together with 20d. received from red-headed Davy [de Davy cum rubio capite] for the sale of timber, make the sum of Thomas Stoteville's receipts 15s.; of which he craves to be allowed 11d. for "pynnyng of the benche" by two men for one day, and for "lyms" for the same 4d., and for two men for one day "for hewyng of the fote trees for the benche" 10d., and for the repair of the "hay† wt a lyne for the same" 22d. "Item, for a forme bowght for 3eman‡ table" 8d.; also for the repair of the hearth and of our chamber, to wit, of me and my fellow Sybyle, paid to the tiler and carpenter 2s. 4d.; also for the repair of the Hall at the "Steyr" and over the porch, 19d.; sum 8s. 6d. And so, of the 15s. he owes 7s. 6d.§

Mem. he paid for the repair of the ditch in length 25 perches outside the hay† [sepes] for the conies, to the gardiner of Staple Inn [gardinario de Stapilin?], in the 36th year [1457] 16d.; also for a "hache" for his chamber door, 8d.

Received by the Treasurer from Richard Gardiner for the farm of the garden, anno 35,—13s. 4d.

Auditors for Asplond: Ingoldysby, Wallewyn.

The Pensioner paid the balance of his account, 58s., to the Treasurer.

John Eltonhede was assigned to the chamber at the end of the Hall, which belonged to Robert Willenhale and Richard Yaxley, with their consent and the consent of the Governors this 35th year. And the same John Eltonhede shall have the power at his own pleasure to choose a Fellow of the Society to be assigned with him to the said chamber, before Michaelmas next.

And on the last day of July then next, he chose Richard Iseham, a Fellow of the Society, who was admitted and assigned by the Governors to the said chamber, there to dwell at his own good pleasure.

Penalty for discontinuance in Easter vacation this year 13s. 4d.

Penalty for discontinuance in the autumn vacation 6s. 8d. and fo. 105. not more because in that time there was a plague [pestilencia].
[Two of the discontinuers were pardoned; one because he had leave on account of the plague; the other for the same reason, but on condition that he kept another term instead of this one.]

Governors, 36 Henry VI, 1457-8:—
Thomas Stodevile, Richard Yaxlee. fo. 106.
Treasurer: Thomas Vmfray.
Pensioner: John Sulyard.
Marshall: John Sulyard.
Master of the Revels: Caldwell.
Escheator*: Menwynnek.

Former Stewards mentioned: Ive, Andrew, Hillerryssdon, Moyle, Anderby, Mildenale, and Floyer.
There remains in the custody of the Treasurer a roll of the subsidy of 2od., to be received from 40 persons; total, £3. 6s. 8d.†
For one new ground floor chamber [bassa camera] not yet assigned.
For an assignment to Leyton's Chamber [? in Camera Leyton] not hitherto assigned, Sum £3.
To be received from Passelewe for his assignment to the chamber with the study, late Lovell's, 13s. 4d.
There remains unpaid for the assignment of Playter's chamber [? camere Playt'], 13s. 4d.
Received from Terell senior for the assignment of his fo. 107. chamber with Laynton, 20s.

Sum total of the Treasurer's receipts, £33. 2s. 1d.

Schotboltt was admitted by the body of the Society [per corpus Societatis] on the Saturday before the Feast of S. Edmund, fo. 108, King and Martyr [Nov. 20], and on his admission the Society granted him the chamber called "Denys Chambre," with the garden annexed thereto; and for building a new house in the said garden for his study [pro scriptorio suo] he is to pay yearly for the house and garden, 3s. 4d. beyond his pension. He is to be admitted to repasts when the court is sitting, and further as long as his books are open at Westminster [quamdiu libri sui sint patentes* apud Westm']. He is pardoned all his vacations, for which favour he pays 20s.

Levermore was admitted and pardoned all vacations, for which he paid 20s.†

Hyham was admitted, and was to keep six vacations, and pay 6s. 8d. for each default. And it was granted that he might be at the clerks' commons [ad communes clerycales] for three years.

Glynne was admitted, and was to keep the feast of Christmas next and one other vacation of his own choice within the time of his vacation; for which favour he paid 13s. 4d.

Terell junior was admitted and pardoned all vacations at the instance of Thomas Tyrell, Knight, his father, John Leynton, and others; for which favour he paid 40s.

Calthorpe was admitted and pardoned all vacations; he was to be admitted to repasts when his lord or lady are in town or at Westminster; for which favour he was to pay 13s. 4d. and give the Society a buck and a doe within the three years next following.

Clerk was admitted and pardoned all vacations, for which favour he was to give the Society a pipe of good red wine, to wit, a "hoggeshed" at Christmas next, and another "hoggeshed" at the Christmas following.

Bewle was admitted and pardoned three vacations, provided always that Christmas is not within the pardon.

He claimed allowance of 29s. for a chalice, a corporal and a white cloth for the chalice [pro veste albam pro calice (sic)] bought by him. He paid £4 9s. 9d. to the Steward, as appears by the Pantry Book.
Balance, £1 13s. 7d., paid to Richard Yaxlee, the Treasurer.

Auditors of Syliard, the Pensioner:
Folbery and Wallewin.

Mem. that a certain Register left by Richard Drax was delivered to Richard Yaxle to be safely kept for the use of the Society.

Governors, 37 Henry VI, 1458-9:
Maryscall, Heworth, 1458-9.
Sebyle, Asplon junior.
Treasurer: Richard Yaxlee.
Pensioner: Walwyn.
Marshall: Goldyngton.
Master of the Revels: Hyham.

Michaelmas Term. Asplon junior, one of the Governors, and Asplon senior, his brother, were admitted and assigned to the chamber in which Shotbolt lay and slept [? iacebat et requieuit]. Asplon senior paying 13s. 4d.

Baynyard was admitted at the instance of William Jenney and pardoned three vacations, namely, two Christmasses and one Easter at his pleasure.
Croftes was admitted and pardoned one vacation, and another if he shall bring to the Society a Fellow of good family and condition.

Auditors of the Pensioner: Jenney junior and Gascoigne.

* He was probably the Chapel Keeper or Dean of the Chapel; see post, fo. 112.
1459-60. Governors, 38 Henry VI. 1459-60:—

William Gaynesforth,    John Jenney junior,
Thomas Ryplyngham,      John Sylyard.
Pensioner: Walwyn.
Marshall: Mustell.
Master of the Revels: Bryscowe.

fo. 119. Philip Morgan was assigned to the new chamber with John Levyrmore, in place of Walter Clerk, now absent, for which assignment he paid 6s. 8d. Moreover he shall not be turned out unless another chamber with a fire-place is assigned to him, or his noble shall be restored.

fo. 120. Whereas the Society was indebted to William Lyndley, the baker, in the sum of £42 sterling in the time of John Joye, late Steward of the Inn, as appeared by a tally made between the baker and Joye. It is agreed between the Society, the late Steward and the baker, that the said Joye shall pay the baker £3 6s. 8d., and shall find sufficient security for the payment of 45 marks at such feasts as may be agreed on between them; for which 5 marks so paid and the security so to be found, the baker has pardoned the Society £8 13s. 4d.

Whereas the Society was indebted to A., late wife of Walter Mildynhale, the brewer, in £46 8s. in the time of the said late Steward, as appears by the tally made between the brewer and the late Steward; it is agreed that the said John Joye shall pay the brewer £6, and shall find sufficient security for the payment of £20 to the said A. at such feasts as they shall agree upon; for which payment and security the said A. the brewer has pardoned the Society £20.

Whereas John Joye, late Steward of the Inn, fully accounted before John Sulyard and Robert Gascoigne, auditors for the Society, for all receipts touching the said office for the whole of the time of his stewardship, whereupon he undertook to exonerate the Society from all debts due by the Society to the baker and the brewer and other creditors, for the whole of the time of his stewardship; and thereupon the Governors delivered to him all the rolls for the commons of the Fellows for the whole of that time due from divers fellows, to be collected by him, and have committed to him every manner of power and favour which they can for the collecting of the debts in the rolls. And whereas the "apparelle"* of the whole of the time when Joye was Steward amounts to £22 sterling, and the reward for filling the office to £13 6s. 8d., which in the whole amounts to £35 6s. 8d., to which amount the said John Joye is in surplusage on his account, whereof he is satisfied of £28 13s. 4d., because William Lyndley the baker pardoned £8 13s. 4d. and the brewer pardoned £20, therefore the Society owes him clear £6 13s. 4d., of which he shall have payment from the Treasurer of the Inn.

Auditors of the Pensioner: Roger Townesende, Robert Gascoigne.

38 Henry VI. 1459-60. Auditors of John Joy, late Steward, B.B. II., Townesende, Huddesfeld and Walewyn.* John Jenney, John Sulyard.† It is ordained by the Governors that if any [member] of the Society be in arrear with his pension for more than one year he shall be removed from the Society.

Governors, 39 Henry VI, 1460-1:—
Marshall,
Sybyle,
Treasurer: Roger Townesende.
Pensioner: Walwyn.
Marshall: Townesende,
Master of the Revels: Robson.
Butler: Huddesfeld.
Chapel Keeper: Richard Iseham.

William Manyngham was admitted September 20th, 1460-1 and with the consent of the Society he was admitted to repasts, but he was not to be in commons unless he wished; he was to keep all his vacations, and during his vacations he might be at clerks' commons [ad communes clericales] if he wished.

William Haseldene was admitted to repasts as long as and as often as the Earl of Worcester should be in London, and on other occasions he was to be in commons as he was before. Dated October 20th, 1 Edward IV.‡

* This name appears to be smeared out.
† These names added.
‡ Edward's reign is said to have begun on March 4th, 1461, but this entry clearly was in 1460, for in the MS. it comes between September 20, 39 Henry VI, 1460, and Easter, 1 Edward IV, 1461.
John Lowys was admitted to repasts for life, Easter Term, 1 Edward IV, 1461.

Butler: Isham.
Master of the Revels: Browne.
"Colyar": Dabrigecourt.*

July 1. It is ordered by the Society that every Fellow shall pay yearly for his pension 4s., namely 12d. in each term. In each term the Pensioner shall fix a day before which every Fellow must pay his pension for that term, or one of the Society for him, or he shall go out. Every Pensioner shall answer for all those who are on his Roll, or he shall send them out as aforesaid. No person so ejected from the Society shall be re-admitted without making a fine with the Society, as well for the amount of the pension accruing while he was put out, together with all arrears, as also for his trespass and contempt.

November 6. John Crakenthorp was pardoned all arrears of his pension up to seven years before last Michaelmas, on condition that he pay three years of it to the Pensioner [now] and the residue before Michaelmas next.

November 6. Amfitz was pardoned for not keeping his vacation last Easter, because he was taken prisoner by the King's rebels, and for other causes, as to which he took his corporal oath.

November 1. Pydelden was admitted to repasts as long as and as often as the Abbat of S. Augustine's, Canterbury, should be in London.

Martinmas. Bolney was admitted to repasts for life.

William Geney may have two servants [valettos] if he wish, each of them at 14d. a week [for commons].

December 1. Reginald Arneburgh was admitted to repasts for seven years.

November 18. Audit of the accounts of Roger Townesend,

* This list (with some slight differences) is given in its proper place on folio 123., but has been crossed out. It is given again on folio 125. In the first list the Butler's name was Belwarde, and Dabridgecourt is called "Escheator denarium focalium."
the [late] Treasurer, for the two years preceding. He accounted for £14 10s. 6d. received, and for £12 10s. 6d. paid. No items are given.

Michaelmas Term. Richard Walwyn was admitted to repasts as long as he should remain on the business of John, Earl of Worcester,* at London, or at the Tower of London, or near London.

First week after the Purification, 1 Edw. IV. [1462]. William Elyot was admitted into the Society and pardoned all fo. 126. vacations, and he was admitted to repasts, because he had well and faithfully borne himself to the Society in the office of Bacularius [Sergeant, or qy. Mace-bearer, but probably a mistake for Botularius or botellarius, butler], for a long time. He was not to be in commons unless he wished.

Accounts of Richard Isham, Treasurer, before Nicholas fo. 128. Statthum, Roger Townesend and Robert Gascoigne, auditors, from Michaelmas i Edward IV, [1461] to Michaelmas 2 Edward IV, [1462]. Receipts £5 9s. 4d. Payments £3 17s. 10d.

Easter Term, 1465. Vaus was admitted and, for a fine of 20s., was pardoned all vacations, and he might have a clerk [clericus] at commons with the yeomen [cum valettis].

Asshfield was admitted and pardoned all vacations because he had well and diligently filled the office of butler [? penecer for pincerna] to the Society. He was to be at repasts as long as the lord whom he serves shall be in the City [?].

* See post, fo. 140.
Hilary Term, 1465. Kenelm Digas was put out of the Society, because, on the Sunday before Christmas day, he violently drew his dagger, in the Hall of the said Inn, upon Denys, one of the Fellows of the Inn. Afterwards, on the 1st of March, at the instance of several Fellows, Digas was re-admitted, on condition that he should not carry a dagger within the Inn or the precinct thereof for one whole year, because he had offended with his dagger in form aforesaid, and further that he paid a fine of 40s. for the offence. The fine was afterwards pardoned.

fo. 140. John Hawe and John Turpyn were admitted to the chamber with the fire-place [cum chamino] in which Sir Geoffrey the Rector dwelt within Lincoln's Inn, for which they paid the Society 26s. 8d.*

John Eltonhede was admitted to repasts because he was the auditor of divers magnates of England and for divers other considerations; he might have two clerks at the yeomen's commons [ad communes valettorum]; he paid 20s.

fo. 141. Ten marks, together with twelve marks of the pension collected by William Donyngton for the following year, were paid to the Bishop of Chichester, the Lord of the Inn, for the rent, as appears by the acquittance of John Wode, the Receiver of the said Bishop. [Underneath this entry is written: Vacat quia postea maius et plenius declaratur.]

1465-6 Michaelmas, 5 Edward IV, 1465:—
Governors: Thomas Rypplyngham, Roger Townesende, John Sulyard, William Huddesfeld,
Lent Reader: John Sulyard.
Treasurer: Richard Isham.
Marshall: Richard Isham.
Pensioner: William Donyngton.
Butler for Christmas: John Stanlow.
Master of the Revels: Edward Jenney.
Escheator for fuel [Eschaetor pro focale]: Hamund.

fo. 142. John Best was admitted, Hilary Term, 1466, and pardoned all vacations because he was Coroner of England and had to attend to the King's book; he might have two clerks in commons at 14d. [a week each]; and he paid the Society 26s. 8d.

* See ante, fo. 137.
Baldwin the Clerk was admitted in Trinity Term, and pardoned all his vacations because he was a priest; he paid 20s.

William Debenhem was admitted to the chamber, late fo. 143. Walter Hungerford’s, with Nicholas Stathum, with his consent; for which he gave a buck, a sore [sowrus, a four-year-old buck], and three gallons of wine.

26 November, 1466. James Hoberd is admitted to the fo. 144. chamber late Robert Heworth’s, and now Thomas Marshall’s, to have it immediately after the death of the said Thomas Marshall, or sooner if they agree about it. Provided that James shall not have with him in the said chamber any fellow except such as he shall choose; for which he shall pay 10s.

William Donyngton, the Pensioner, accounted, and was found in arrear £3 10s. 6½d.

Richard Isham, the Treasurer, accounted, and was found in arrear £7 6s. 8d.

John Stanlow, collector of a subsidy levied within the Inn, accounted and was found in arrear £7. 6s. 8d.

Statute:—

In honour of Almighty God, of Jesus Christ our Lord, of S. Mary his mother, and of S. Richard, formerly Bishop of Chichester, late dwelling in this house of Lincoln’s Inn, and the true possessor thereof in right of his church of Chichester aforesaid; and for the increase and multiplication of knowledge and understanding of the laws of the land of England in the worshipful persons, Fellows of the same Society and Inn in the same place in time to come and without end awaiting [call to the Bench], and those succeeding and to succeed them, [in personis honorabilibus consortibus eorumdem Societatis et Hospicii ibidem temporibus futuris et perpetuis expectantibus continuantibus et continuandis.], and for the support of good and virtuous governance of the same, in Easter Term, 6 Edward IV. [1466], by the Governors of the said Society, in general council held in the Chapel of S. Richard in the said Inn according to the custom thereof, all being summoned who are of the said Society, as well at the Bench as at the Bar, called “utterbarresters,” to communicate, understand, ordain and do what should be good, useful and necessary for the Society and the Inn, by their common consent and sole and spontaneous wish, and by their authority, the underwritten statute is ordained in future times to endure; that is to say, In the first place it is ordained that all and singular the Fellows of the Society who now are and who in future shall be, and each of them, as soon as he or they shall be called from the Bar of the Inn to the Bench thereof, and shall be admitted, shall keep six whole vacations in the three years immediately after they shall have been called and admitted to the Bench in form aforesaid, that is to say, one month in Lent in the time of the Society's Reading, and another month in autumn in the time of the Society's Reading, and that they shall be personally present at the Readings there every vacation of this kind, in the first week in which the Reading begins; Provided always that if any members of the Society shall be called from the Bar to the Bench and admitted in the first or second week of such a vacation, and shall keep all the remainder of such vacation, it shall be allowed them for one whole vacation; And that he or they shall be in commons for the whole of the month during the said Reading; And that all and each of these Fellows, to whom it shall happen to be called from the Bar to the Bench and be admitted in manner and form aforesaid, shall swear upon the Holy Gospels to keep six vacations in manner and form aforesaid in all respects, excuse of every kind laid aside, except illness in themselves or himself, or in their or his father, mother or wife, and except writs, plaints and pleas of assizes or other pleas or of nisi prius, by him or them, or any other to his or their use, to be taken, terminated or pleaded within the said month of the time of the Reading, or within fourteen days before or after the said Reading, and in the same way as to any such writs, pleas and plaints against him or them, or against any other concerning his or their own lands or tenements within such time as aforesaid, being only accepted; Otherwise, if they shall make default, then they and each of them, for each of their six vacations not kept in manner and form aforesaid, shall pay to the Society 20s. as often as there shall be default in them or any of them.

By the authority of the Society it was then and there ordained and established that if any of the underwritten Fellows and of all the other Fellows of the Bench who shall undertake this present ordinance, or not, shall make default in keeping his vacations as aforesaid, he shall forfeit to the Society 20s. for each default; Except as aforesaid.

And further, the Fellows whose names follow, who in past years have completed [perampleverunt] their vacations, and many of whom have done Readings, nevertheless of their own spontaneous wish, for the causes aforesaid, have agreed, and each of them has agreed, to continue certain vacations, as follows:

fo. 146. I, Henry Etwell, do promise to continue one vacation in manner and form aforesaid, within one year next following, or to pay the Society 20s., all excuses laid aside except as aforesaid.
[Those following are in similar form].
John Jenney, two vacations within two years.
Thomas Ryplyngham, three vacations within three years.
William Eland, two vacations within three years.
Thomas Vmfray, three vacations within three years.
Robert Folbery, one vacation within three years.
John Gyrton, one vacation within two years.
Nicholas Stathum, four vacations within five years.
Richard Yaxle, three vacations within three years.
John Asplon, two vacations within three years.
Thomas Asper, two vacations within three years.
John Sulyard, five vacations within four years.
Robert Tounesende, four vacations within four years.
William Huddesfeld, three vacations within four years.
Thomas Playter, five vacations within four years.
Robert Gascoigne, six vacations within four years.

To fulfil the said statute and according to the true intent thereof, in the Autumn Vacation, 6 Edward IV, William Donnynton, who in the first week of that vacation was called from the Bar and admitted to the Bench of the Inn, swore on the Holy Gospels, before the Society in the Chapel, to keep his vacations according to the form of that Statute; and he then and there fully kept that vacation.

John Jenney, John Asplon, John Sulyard, Roger Townesende, fo. 147. Thomas Playter and Robert Gascoigne, also kept that vacation.

Michaelmas Term, 6 Edward IV, 1466. 1466-7
Governors:
Nicholas Stathum, Roger Townesende,
John Asplon, Robert Gascoigne.

Lent Reader: Bartholomew Bolney.
Treasurer: James Hoberd.
Marshal: William Donyngton.
Pensioner: Richard Whytley.
Christmas Butler: John Barry.
Master of the Revels: Thomas Jenney.
Escheator: Robert Cartilage.

Trinity Term, 7 Edw. IV, 1467, an unfortunate accident happened; one Robert Hillersden, a Fellow of the Society, with malice aforethought, and incited thereto by Thomas Jenney, struck Robert Stanshawe with a dagger seriously in several places, so that he despaired of his life for a long time; for which cause, Hillersden was arrested by the Society and taken to the King's Counter, and there he was committed to prison at the instance of the Society as a suspected felon; and thereupon, by Richard Illyngworth, knight, Chief Baron of the Exchequer, John Ingoldesby, one of the Barons, William Jenney, Serjeant-at-law, and the Governors and the whole Society, the said Robert Hillersden was put out of the Society; and the said Thomas Jenney and Robert Stanshaw also.

First week of Lent, 6 Edw. IV, 1467. John Digas and John Bradshaw were put out of commons for playing at cards [ad cardos]; they were re-admitted on payment of 6s. 8d. each.

Trinity Term, 7 Edw. IV, 1467. Robert Stanshaw was put out of commons [and out of the Society, interlined] on account of a brawl between himself and Hillersden; he remained out of commons until the first week of the Reading next following, and then was re-admitted to the Society subject to his good behaviour; he paid a fine of 40s.

Same term. Thomas Jenney was put out of the Society because he was the cause of the said brawl; he remained out until the Wednesday next after the Feast of All Saints following, when, by great and continuous labour and most humble submission, he was re-admitted to the Society; he paid a fine of 40s.

Afterwards, in Trinity Term, 8 Edward IV., 1468, the said Robert Hillersden, by long and continuous labour throughout the whole year, and by most humble submission to the Society, and also by the great exertions of his friends as well Fellows of Court [Curie] in other places† as others, was re-admitted, strictly on the condition and intent that he should behave himself well towards the Fellows and the Society in all respects, on pain of expulsion for ever. For this he was to pay 10 marks before coming into commons. ‡ Of which sum, he paid 40s. in Michaelmas Term; the residue is still unpaid, so he is still out of commons. § fo. 149. Michaelmas Term. John Porter was admitted, and, at the special instance of Robert Gascoigne, one of the Governors, and because the said John has well and faithfully borne himself in the office of Butler, he was pardoned all vacations except three, which he was to keep when he pleased within three years. He was to be admitted to repasts except in the vacations which he kept.

* Remainder illegible.
† This seems to mean members of other Inns of Court.
‡ This sentence is an addition.
§ When he was to be in commons.
In Trinity Term, 7 Edw. IV., it happened that certain feats of arms [facta ad arma] between Anthony Wydevile, Lord de Scales, on the one part, and the bastard son of the Duke of Burgundy on the other part, were to be done in a place called Smythfeld; whereupon the King commanded the four Inns of Court that each Inn should order four men of the Inn to attend the King armed, in the said place at the time of the doing the said feats; which order was rashly [improvide] agreed to by both the Temples against our wish and consent, but afterwards it was agreed to by all; and this Society appointed four Fellows, namely, W. Debenham, R. Debenham, J. Gygges and John Joyce, well armed, etc., and moreover they assembled on a large scaffold to see the tournament, etc; for which [scaffold] they paid 100s., and for the expenses of the said armed follows 40s. And thereupon it was agreed by the Society that each Fellow present in town should pay 2s., and each one absent 12d., as more fully appears in the account.

Michaelmas Term, 7 Edward IV., 1467.

1467–8

Governors:

[The same as in the preceding year.†]

Treasurer: Richard Whitley [fo. 153].

Autumn Reader: Donyngton, 7 Edw. IV.

Lent Reader: Tounesend, 8 Edw. IV.

Debenham, Fellows of the Society, were admitted to repasts when their Lords or Ladies were in London or the suburbs; and similarly they might be at repasts if they came to town on the special business of their Lords or Ladies, as long as they remained on such business, notwithstanding the absence of their Lords or Ladies; for this they would give a buck in autumn and a doe in winter next year, and after that at their pleasure.

Friday after Pentecost, 8 Edw. IV. [1468], William Barton was admitted and pardoned three vacations within three years at his own pleasure; he was to be at the clerk’s commons three or four years at his own pleasure.

Michaelmas Term, 8 Edw. IV., [1468]. Several fellows of the Inn were robbed in their chambers, namely, Constable, Coket, Stanshowe and Stanney. The same Term several Fellows, namely, Cornewaleis and J. Ingoldesby, went by night . . . . and played at cockals [ad talos], and stole [?] furebanf] the conies of the Society; and while Cornwaleis, Ingoldesby and Temperley were chasing the conies one night, Temperley was robbed by strangers, namely, by Pole and Smyth, as it was said, with the consent of Ingoldesby; which appeared to be so upon examination before the Society, wherefore Ingoldesby and Cornwaleis were adjudged out of commons, and Temperley also.

Briscowe, Autumn Reader, 8 Edw. IV.

_fo. 153._ Michaelmas Term, 7 Edw. IV., [1467]. Memorandum, the Governors this year remain [in office] for next year without any change because the Society did not assemble, but was dispersed on account of the plague; the accounts of the officers were taken the following year.

Accounts of Richard Whiteley, Pensioner from Michaelmas, a° 6, to Michaelmas a° 7.
- Receipts £25 0s. 8d.
- Payments £17 7s. 5½d.

Note: Nothing was paid to the lord for the rent this year.

The Treasurer, James Hubbert, accounts [_i.a._] for £5 15s. od. collected for the "Skaffeldes."
- Receipts £15 1s. 6⅛d.
- Payments £10 os. 4d.

Note that £7 10s. od., part of the said £10 os. 4d., was paid for the scaffolds; and so the payment for the scaffolds exceeded the amount collected for them by 35s., which was paid out of the Treasury.

Accounts of Richard Whitley, Pensioner, from Michaelmas 7 to Michaelmas 8 Edw. IV.
- Receipts: —£21 for pensions; 13s. 4d. for the rent of the Garden this year; 40s. received from Stanney and Stanshowe for their assignment to a new chamber near Jenney's.
  - Sum of receipts £26 13s. 4d.
- Paid for repairs £5 16s. 7d.
- Paid for the aforesaid new chamber, with the Lord's consent, £5.
  - For the Pensioner's purse-fee according to the ancient allowance 5s. 4d.
  - Sum of allowances £21 1s. 1d.

* For the tournament at Smithfield; see _ante_, p. 45.
Accounts of the same Richard Whitley, the Treasurer, for the same year.

Receipts: £5 1s. 2½d., balance from last year; [etc.].

Sum of receipts £27 10s. 7d.

Paid £9 3s. 4d. to the Lord of the Inn in full payment of all arrears for the rent of the Inn up to Michaelmas Term, 8 Edward IV., as well with the consent of the Bishop as of Robert Wilkynson, the deputy of the said Lord, as appears by their acquittance remaining in the hands of the said Richard Whitley, now the Treasurer.

Item 6s. 8d. for the Marshal of the Inn at Christmas.

Item 20s. for the minstrels at the same time.

Sum of allowances £13 os. od.

Balance: £14 10s. 7d.

Note that the Lord Bishop and his said deputy as well as the said Prior* are fully content and satisfied of and for all arrears up to the said Term.

Note also that the said Society now stands cleared of creditors of the House or Inn.

Note further that the Steward accounted the same term, and he will acquit the Society against all creditors; but there are apparels which the said Steward shall discharge at his peril [disonerabit sub periculo suo]; and to do this, the Society will lend him 100s. on sufficient security for repayment, but not otherwise.

It was settled and agreed between the Lord Bishop and his said deputy of the one part and the said R. Tounesend, R. Gascoigne, Governors, and the said Richard Whiteley, the Pensioner as well as Treasurer, for the whole Society, of the other part, that the Society, etc., shall pay hereafter yearly 8 marks clear for all demands, etc., as long as the Society shall please, during the life of the Bishop.

Memorandum, the Society gave to the Church of S. Andrew the Apostle,† for the repair of the church and for making a new belfry, £3 3s. 4d., which sum was collected from the Fellows, as follows: from every Fellow on the Bench 20d., from certain others 20d., from others 12d., 8d., 6d. or 4d., according, etc.

* He has not been mentioned before. Probably the Prior of S. Giles' Hospital, to whom, as subsequent entries show, a rent was paid for the Coney Garth.
† S. Andrew's, Holborn.
1468-9  Michaelmas Term, 8 Edward IV.

Governors:
John Jenney, Huddesfeld,
John Suliard, Donyngton.

Lent Reader: William Huddesfeld.
Treasurer: Richard Whytley.
Pensioner: Kenelm Digas.
Marshal: Richard Whitley.
Butler for Christmas: Thomas Lovell.
Master of the Revels: Robert Rede.
Escheator: John Coket.

John Suliard and Robert Gascoigne may each have two clerks [in commons] at 14d. a week for each clerk.

Autumn Reader: Hagh.

Michaelmas Term, a° 8 [1468]; John Botiller was admitted to the Society at the special instance of John Suliard, one of the Governors, and was admitted to repasts, because he had borne himself well and faithfully in the office of Butler.

Easter Term, a° 9 [1469]; John Thorneburgh was admitted at the special instance of Roger Towneshend; he was allowed to keep his vacations within 5 years.

Trinity Term, a° 9. Thomas Croft was pardoned the arrears of his pension on condition that he should keep five vacations within the next three years.

Thomas Banyard and Thomas Butside were put out of commons for certain opprobrious words between them in the fourth week of the Autumn Reading, a° 9, and on their re-admission to commons each of them paid a fine of 2od. for the trespass.

Hilary Term, a° 8. It was agreed and established by all the Fellows, as well of the Bench as of the Bar, with their unanimous consent and assent, that every Fellow living, dwelling or staying within the City of London or the suburbs of the same, or in the town of Westminster, the Borough of Suthwerke, the street [stratam] of Bermundesey, or at Bermundsey, S. Giles', Clattun-well, Towrehill, or [being] on the King's service, may for the future be in commons in those weeks in which fall the feasts of the Purification of the Blessed Virgin Mary, the Ascension of our Lord, the Nativity of S. John the Baptist, and All Saints, and at repasts in the same weeks, si exeat, etc., secundum rat[um].

It is ordained by the Society that in future no Fellow shall have his clerk in commons in the Inn at 14d. a week, or his livery [liberatura] from the Buttery, unless he be of the Bench or Outer Bar [extra barram]; and no one of the Outer Bar, except by the discretion and assignment of the Governors for the time being, who shall, at the time of the election of the Reader, diligently examine and approve of the ability of those who assiduously keep their rule [?] formam suam] without the Bar and are worthy of this privilege; and mention of their permission [libertas] shall be made in the Black Book at the time. Excepting those, as well of the Bench as of the Bar, who are otherwise privileged by the said Book before this ordinance.

No one of the Bench or Outer Bar shall, by the said ordinance, have those privileges except for his own clerk and at his own expenses.

William Herberd, son of the Earl of Penbroch [sic] may have one clerk at commons in the Inn at 14d. a week.

Robert Clere is pardoned four vacations for 30s.
John Wikes is pardoned four vacations for 33s. 4d.

Accounts of Kenelm Digas, Pensioner, from Michaelmas a° 8 to Michaelmas a° 9.

Receipts: \£ 24 8s. 8d. for Pensions; 13s. 4d. for the rent of the garden. Total: \£ 25 2s. 0d.
Paid for divers repairs 59s. 1½d.
For the Lord's rent \£ 5 6s. 8d.
For his purse fee by ancient allowance 5s. 4d.
Total allowances: \£ 19 4s. 7½d.

Receipts: \£ 34 7s. 11½d.

Autumn Reader a° 10: Whitlegh.

fo. 160. Hilary Term a° 9. Nicholas Eltonhede is admitted to the Society and pardoned three vacations; he may be at clerks' commons for three years.

William Vampage is admitted to the Society and to the Master's commons; he is pardoned two vacations at the special instance of William Rylston.

Christopher Willughby is admitted to the Society, and is pardoned five vacations at the special instance of William Jenney, Serjeant at Law. He shall give the Society a buck for each of the said vacations that he shall not keep.

William Chesman is pardoned four vacations which he has not kept, on condition that he keep three vacations within two years; and no more [than three] because he was promised on his admission that he should have one pardoned, whereof no mention was made, as he swears.

Michaelmas Term, a° 9. Croft senior is admitted and, at the special instance of Richard Walwen, he is pardoned his vacations; so that he shall give the Society a buck in summer and a doe in winter.

Easter Term, 10 Edward IV. Simon Burton was admitted and pardoned all vacations, and [it was granted] that he should not be elected to any office in the Inn, and that he should have a clerk in commons at 14d. a week; at the special instance of John West, the King's Coroner, and for 26s. 8d. paid [by Simon.]

fo. 161. Sum remaining clear in the hands of the said accounter [computantis] £35 19s. 5½d., which sum he had ready; whereof he paid to John More, the Steward, £7 which the Society owed him by way of surplusage by reason of his office, as appears at the foot of the Stewards account this year, 49 Henry VI. * for which £7 he [the Steward] undertook to indemnify the Society against all creditors. And so there remains in the hands of the said Richard Whitley £28 19s. 5½d.

Michaelmas, 49 Hen. VI, 1470. John More, Steward of the Inn, accounted. The debts due to all the creditors amounted to £28 19s. 6d., of which sum the Society owed the Steward £6 17s. 8¾d., as appears by the Steward’s account; which sum, together with 2s. 3½d. for the dinner of the Auditors [pro cena audit], was paid to the Steward, who undertook to indemnify the Society against all creditors.

And thereupon all the creditors brought in their tallies and delivered them up to the Steward to be cancelled; the Steward delivered them to the Governors, and the Governors to Richard Whitlegh, the Treasurer, for safe custody.

Edmund Bedyngfeld and Thomas Lovell were assigned to the top chamber in the new building [in alta camera nove constructionis] which stands in the middle [que stat medeo], for which they have given four marks. And the survivor of them shall not at any time have another Fellow [assigned to the chamber] except such a one as he shall agree to.

Michaelmas, 49 Henry VI, 1470. Robert, Abbat of fo. 162. Mussenden,† in the County of Buckingham, was admitted and pardoned his vacations, and was allowed to be at repasts; for these liberties he granted to the Society a ‘hoggeshed’ of red wine yearly at Christmas as long as he lived.

John More‡ was admitted, and pardoned his vacations, and allowed to be at repasts, and to have a clerk [in commons] for 14d. a week, because as Butler and Steward, which offices he had long held, he had faithfully borne himself, and would take no wages for the time when he filled the office of Steward. He was assigned to the chamber late Thomas Riplyngham’s.

[Here follows a list of 245 names; some are added in later hands, some are struck out, and some are marked as mortuus, and some as extra.]

fo. 171. [Here is another long list of names, 144 in number, without any heading; a leaf is apparently missing as letters C, D, E and F, do not appear, and B is probably imperfect. It appears to have been written soon after the previous list, as it contains a few of the additions but not all.]

fo. 174. Hilary Term, 49 Henry VI., 1471. Whereas Richard Higham lost three vacations, namely, Christmas, 1469, Autumn, 1470 and Christmas, 1470, the said Richard, on account of his serious illness [propter nimiam infrimitatem] is pardoned two of those vacations: for the third he shall pay according to custom; and for the two pardoned, he shall keep other two next after the end of his vacations.

John Glynne junior was admitted in Michaelmas Term, 12 Edw. IV. 1472, and admitted to repasts for the first year; and he was pardoned three vacations, considering that he would sustain great labours with regard to prosecuting the appeal as to the death of his father, and on that account he would probably be able to continue very little that year.

Richard Leuermore was admitted to repasts: he paid 26s. 8d. to the Governors, who delivered the same to the Rector to pay for breviaries [pro portiferiis].

William Gayne was admitted March 2nd, 13 Edward IV. 1474, and pardoned three vacations; he was to be allowed to sit at clerks' commons for five years after his admission, at the special instance of Edmund Gynney.

fo. 175. March 21st, 14 Edward IV. 1474. William Clopton was admitted; and at the instance of John Suliard he was pardoned six vacations and admitted to repasts.
Michaelmas Term, 12 Edward IV, 1472. John Stanney was admitted to repasts.

[Added in another hand]. Void until he shall perform his promises to the Society, namely, that he would bring with him to the Society a certain writing of lease for 90 years of the Inn of Lincoln’s Inn, under the seals of the Bishop of Chichester and his Chapter, made to divers persons of the Inn, at a rent of eight marks yearly. [Cancelled.]

November 30th, 11 Edward IV, 1471. Baldwin Hyde, fo. 177. Clerk, was admitted by the Governors to a chamber in the newest building [novissimi edificii] of Lincoln’s Inn, to hold to himself alone without any one else [sine socio]; for which assignment he paid £4.

Kenelm Digas was assigned to the top chamber newly built [in alta camera nove constructionis] next to the lane leading from “Fletstrete” to “Holborne”; for which he gave the Society 40s. He shall at no time have any fellow except such a one as he shall agree to.

With the consent of the said Kenelm, Thomas Croft was assigned to the said chamber, for which he gave the Society 40s.

Accounts of Thomas Appulton, Pensioner, for the year fo. 178. beginning Michaelmas, 11 Edward IV, [1471], before Richard Walwyn, Roger Touneshend and William Donyngton, the Auditors.

Receipts: £32 12s. 0d.

Payments: divers expenses as appears by bill annexed, £26 19s. 4d.; divers necessaries bought for the Chapel, 7s.; allowance for his purse, 5s.; for the Auditors’ dinner [pro cena audit], 3s. 4d.; paid to John Gravenyng the rent of the garden for keeping the walls round the said garden, according to the agreement made with him this year, 13s. 4d.

Total: £28 8s. 0d.

Balance: £4 4s. 0d. Whereof he is respited 25s. 6d. for making [pro factione] the chamber of Robert Vaux, and 58s. 8½d. for making the jakes [pro factura de la sege].

Book II.

12 Edw. IV, 1472, to 22 Hen. VII, 1507.

[Really two books bound up together at some time prior to the commencement of Book III. The first part consists of 65 folios. On folio 1 is written in an old hand "libr 2." The second part consists of 84 folios of slighter larger paper. On the fly-leaf "liber secundus" has been struck out, and "liber 3" written in its place. On the back of folio 84 the words "liber secundus" are written twice over.

Several pages appear to have been torn out of the first part. These folios are missing—6, 7, 10 to 12, 15 to 17.

Part 1 of this volume is referred to several times in Book I. as the "Great Black Book," probably on account of its larger size. The earlier folios of this book cover the period from 1440 to 1471. They consist of various memoranda which for some reason were not entered in Book I.; though in some cases the entries are duplicates of those in that Book. They have been inserted in their proper chronological places.]

fo. 45. Clement Clerk was admitted to the Society, December 1st, 19 Edw. IV, 1479; he was pardoned all vacations and admitted to repasts, for which he gave a hogshead of red wine.

William Croke was admitted to the Society, August 8th, 20 Edw. IV, 1480; he was pardoned all vacations and admitted to repasts, for which he gave a hogshead of wine price 30s.

William Elys* was put out of the Society because he had a woman in his chamber within the Inn one night, and also because during the time he was put out the said woman went to his chamber several times. This was in Lent. Also it was shown to the Society that William had entered the house of one Henry Quarles, a caper of the City of London, and had there taken from his wife and against her will a pair of rosaries [unum par precarum†] of gold, value 7 marks.

And afterwards at the instance of his friends who laboured for him, and also on account of his humble submission and out of reverence for the honourable feast of Easter, he was admitted to the Society again on the conditions following, namely, that in future he shall not be of such a disposition, and that he shall speedily agree with the said Henry for the taking of the rosaries [?], and that he shall pay a fine of 40s. for his re-admission, and if he shall break any of these conditions then he shall be removed from and put out of the Society for ever.

William Nanson, one of the Clerks of the Chancery, was admitted to the Society in Hilary Term, 20 Edw. IV, 1481, and pardoned all vacations, and admitted to repasts, for which he paid a hogshead of wine.
William Elys* was put out of the Society, March 27th, 21 Edw. IV, 1481, because he was caught one night with a woman named Grace in a house of ill-fame [in domo suspecta] near Newgate by the Constable and the Beadle of the Ward, together with many others. And he was brought to the house of the Keeper of Newgate Gaol, and afterwards by special order of John Horne, the Alderman of that Ward, he was taken to the Alderman's house; and if it had not been for the Alderman's reverence for this Society, he would have committed Elys to Newgate Gaol; and also because in times past he has been put out of the Society for having the same woman in the Inn on several occasions. And now through the great labour and instance of his friends and his own humble submission and contrition, he was re-admitted to the Society on this condition, that in future he shall not be in the society of the said woman nor communicate with her in any suspected place or at any unlawful time on pain of being removed and put out of the Society for ever. And for he re-admission he now paid for a fine 6s. 8d. And moreover because it was previously shown to the Society that the said William Elys had taken a pair of rosaries [?] of gold from the wife of one Henry Quareles, citizen and capper of London, and because Henry has not agreed for the taking of them, it was considered by the Society that William Elys shall come to an agreement with Henry for taking them, before Passion Sunday next, otherwise Henry may bring an action against William to have recovery of the said rosaries [?], without displeasing the Society.

Edmund Jenney was elected Autumn Reader; but he showed the Society that he had divers infirmities on account of which he could not exercise the study and labour of reading without great danger and detriment; therefore at his urgent request he was excused. For this he gave the Society a hogshead of wine.

Edward Redmain was put out of the Society for using presumptuous and unsuitable words in answering the Governors and other Benchers openly in Hall in the presence of the Society. For his re-admission he was fined 20d.†

Christopher Hanyngton, one of the Clerks of the Chancery, was admitted to the Society in Hilary Term, 1482, and pardoned all vacations and admitted to repasts; for which he shall pay a hogshead of wine or 20s. as he pleases.

Mem. Whereas William Rilston was assigned by the Governors of the Inn to the ground-floor chamber under the chamber of Kenelm Dygas, newly built in the said Inn, to hold to William alone without any other fellow, for a certain sum of money faithfully paid to the Society; which William in Hilary Term, 21 Edw. IV, sent a letter to the Governors of the Inn, by which he desired that they would assign Robert Constable as his fellow in the said ground-floor chamber; as appears by his letter, in these words:—
"Right wurschipfull sirs and my full gode maistrez, I recomaunde me vnto you as hertly as I can: Please yt you to

By virtue of which and on account of the reverence had for Marmaduke Constable, knight, brother of Robert, and for divers other causes, the said Robert Constable was admitted to the chamber by the Governors, for which he paid 20s. to Richard Higham, the Treasurer.

Henry Veer was admitted to the Society the first week of Lent, and pardoned three vacations on condition that he cause his brother, who is now at "Davys Inne," to be admitted to the Society within the next three years.*

William Gasgyll was admitted to repasts, May 23rd, 22 Edw. IV, on his humble petition to the Society, for which he shall pay 20s.

John Burgoyn was put out of commons for having a woman of doubtful character [suspecta] in his chamber at night ; nevertheless upon his great contrition and humble submission, and upon the great labour of divers friends with the Governors, he was re-admitted to commons, for which he shall give 10s.

John Nethersole was admitted in Trinity Term, 22 Edw. IV, by the Governors ; he may have his allowance in the buttery [liberatam suam in promptuario]† as any other at the Bar has, and also a clerk in commons at 14d. a week.

William Briscoe was admitted to repasts in Trinity Term, for three years, if the case and dispute [lis et discordia] between himself and the Mayor and Commonalty of the City of Coventry shall last so long.

John Butler was admitted by the Society to the newly built chamber which belonged to Kenelm Dygas at the time of his death. For this he shall give 26s. 8d.

It was shown to the Governors and the Society in the week before the feast of S. Andrew the Apostle, 22 Edw. IV, that Creycroft and Tropnell junior had played cards [ad cardas] within the Inn, and that Coteler, Broughton, Hopton, Fekenam, Pudsey and Constable "le terce" had played outside the Inn. Wherefore they were all put out of commons because they knew the premises [premissa]. Afterwards, on their humble submission to the Governors and Society, they were re-admitted on payment of the following fines:—Creycroft 2s., Tropnell 2s., Coteler 2od., Broughton 2od., Hopton 2od., Fekenam 2od., Pudsey 2od., and Constable “te terce” 20d. Afterwards it was shown that at the same time Glyne played cards within the Inn; therefore he was put out of commons. Subsequently he was re-admitted on his humble supplication and submission and on paying a fine of 2s.

John Stanney was admitted to repasts in the feast of the pur. Purification, 22 Edw. IV, 1483, on his humble petition to the Society; for which he shall give 20s.

John Goldewell was admitted into the Society to repasts in the same feast on consideration that his son at “Stapyl In” should be admitted generally, without any pardon or privilege.

Geoffrey Goldewell was admitted in the same feast.

John Carvargh was admitted into the Society on the first Sunday in Lent, 22 Edw. IV, and was pardoned four vacations at his own choice. It was granted by the Governors and Society that he shall be at clerk’s commons as long as he shall please. At the instance of Robert Rede.

Trinity Term, 1 Edw. V, 1483. John Turpyn, on his humble supplication made to the Governors, shall pay the Society for the vacation which he ought to have kept as a Bencher in Autumn last, 13s. 4d.

Autumn Reader, 1 Richard III, 1483: Richard Higham.

Thomas Morsse was put out of commons on October 21st because he had been notified by the Society to communicate instruction [pro eo quod acceptit caudelam* a Societate sua [ad] communicandam eruditionem] after dinner, and he gave the Fellows opprobrious and presumptious words. He was afterwards re-admitted on his humble supplication and on payment of a fine of 20d.†

In the second week of Lent, 1484, Christopher Tropnell was put out of the Society because he seized a woman in "Chaunceler" Lane against her will and took her into "Fletestrete," where a hue and cry was made by her, and thence into "Fayer" Lane to divers procuresses* and suspected places and unto his chamber in "Lyncolnesynne," and there they remained all night.

William Craycroft was put out of the Society because he was present and aided Tropnell to take the woman to his chamber. Craycroft was out of the Society for two weeks before his re-admission, and Tropnell five weeks. They were then re-admitted. Craycroft was fined 20s. of which 16s. 8d. was pardoned at the instance of John Haugh, his kinsman, on the condition that if he should hereafter offend in the like manner, he should pay the whole 20s. Tropnell was fined 40s., but was pardoned 20s. at the instance of Robert Rede on the like condition, and the remaining 20s. was to be paid before his re-entry.

At the end of Michaelmas Term, 5 Hen. VII, Hugh Croft and Fissher were put out of the Society on account of their altercations and an affray between them with their fists; fine on re-admission, each 20d.

Same term. Wood and Fitz were put out of the Society, Wood, because he undertook the moot, and rode out of town without giving sufficient notice of the new moot, so that the moot was not held, in his default; but because, after Wood's default, Cutler undertook that moot, and because Wood did this by accident and in ignorance, he was re-admitted on his supplication, without fine. And because Fitz ought to have kept the moot for himself, and this after the said Michaelmas Term, and sufficient Benchers were present in commons to hear it,* Fitz was put out of the Society; fine on re-admission 20d.

William Cutler for the like default after the same term was put out of the Society; he was re-admitted without fine.

Same term. Aylof and Thacher were put out of the Society for not obeying the orders of the Governors to come and speak with them; after divers supplications by them, they were re-admitted, fines 20d. each.

Hilary Term, 1490. Fitz, Master of the Revels, was put out of the Society for not obeying the order of one of the Benchers after the Revels, and refusing to obey with contemptuous words, as was testified by divers seniors of the Society; fine on re-admission 20d.

Clerk tertius was admitted Jan. 16, 1490, and pardoned all vacations and admitted to repasts; for which he shall give 20s.

Easter Vacation. This was pardoned Robert Constable, Bencher, for 40s. paid in the Chapel in the presence of the Governors and other Benchers, and he shall pay 13s. 4d. for Lent Vacation last.

Trinity Term. Christopher Tropnell was admitted and assigned to the chamber to which Aylof had been assigned; it was conceded that no one else should be assigned to the said chamber during Christopher's life without his leave; for this he will give 13s. 4d.

Edmund Mody was admitted to repasts the first week of Lent; for which he gave 20s.; he will give other 20s. for the rebuilding of the Hall.

* Something seems to be omitted. Apparently Fitz failed to moot.

William Ayloff; fine on re-admission, 3s. 4d.

October 22, 1492. Richard Heigham, John Coket senior, John Coket junior and Thomas Coket were admitted to repasts, and pardoned all vacations, forfeitures, dues and impositions.
And at the same time Thomas Heigham, John Heigham and Thomas West were admitted to the Society at the instance of the said Richard Heigham, and pardoned all vacations and admitted to repasts. For all which they shall give £13 6s. 8d., of which Richard Heigham paid £10 down, and he agreed to pay the residue at Easter next.
John Woode is assigned to the chamber of John Brown, and as he was assigned in the time of William Sharp and with his consent, which was testified by the Governors in that year, he [Woode] shall only pay 10s.

Accounts of John Woode, the Pensioner.
Receipts: £24 4s. od. for various pensions; 6s. 8d. from Orston, as appears in the Black Book;* 13s. 4d. from John Heigham and Thomas Heigham for their assignment to the chamber over the Gate; 10s. from the said John Woode for his assignment to Brown's chamber by order of the Governors, as appears in the Black Book; [other small sums].

It was granted by the Society that Thomas Orston should have and hold his chamber for life without any other Fellow being assigned to him, but if Thomas' son should be admitted to the Society, that then the son should be admitted to the chamber without any fine; for which he paid 6s. 8d.

All Saints Day, 1492. John Thornburgh was admitted to repasts and pardoned all vacations at the Bench hitherto forfeited or due; and because the said John cannot fill the office of Reader because of divers infirmities and the great weakness [detrimentum] of his body, therefore he is pardoned the reading in Lent next; moreover, since the said John on Jan. 20th, 6 Hen. VII, 1491, of his own accord lent the Society £20 for the building of the new Hall, the said John taking into consideration the liberty and pardon aforesaid, grants 10 marks, part of the said £20, namely, 5 marks for the building of the new Hall, and 5 marks for the pardon of the Readership and the vacations; and the residue owed by the Society, viz.—20 marks, he has agreed to take out in commons, repasts, or pensions, or in anything else that may be taken in the Inn; and this he will do by himself or by another Fellow with his consent, or by his sons hereafter when they come into the Society.

[In the Steward's Accounts, 9 & 10 Henry VII, he craves allowance of £9 7s. 10d. for repasts and commons of John Thornborough, and Edward Thornborough and Nicholas Gryffyn, his sons [sic], which had not been paid, in pursuance of the above agreement. fo. 28].

Master of the Revels: Sherard.
Butler: Wadham.
Escheator: Styleman.
Francis Suthwell was put out of the Society for divers offences; fine 2s.
Note that at Christmas this year there was a great pestilence, and therefore it was considered by the Society that another term should be kept in place of this by all who ought to keep this term, and that the Marshal, the Master of the Revels and the Butler, elected for that feast and for the year following, should also be excused, but that they should fill their said offices next Christmas.*

Feb. 6, 8 Hen. VII, 1493. Roger Fytz was admitted to repasts by the Governors, and paid for his admission 40s.; he was excused 10s. of the fine for pulling down the Hall, and he has paid 10s., the residue of that fine, as appears by the last Treasurer's account.
Feb. 20. John Pole was admitted to the Society, pardoned all vacations, and admitted to repasts; he paid 20s.
Feb. 20. John Godeman the like.
April 20. William Clerkson may have his clerk sitting at commons with the servants [ipse haberet clericum suum sedentem ad communes cum valettis], paying therefor what Benchers or Barristers pay for the commons of their servants; he gave 6s. 8d.
February 20, 7 Hen. VII, 1492. John Arundell, special admission [as John Pole's, above]; he paid 20s.
February 20, 7 Hen. VII. William Sayntmaur, Esquire, the like; he paid 40s.

June 18, 1493. William Aylof and Percival Lampton were fo. 22. put out of commons by the Society for not assisting Humfrey Siggewyk and other utter-barristers to correct and punish an assault and affray made by Newenam junior on Walter Hobert in the mesne vacation† between Easter and Trinity Terms last, and for other causes. They were re-admitted June 23rd, on the following conditions:—that William Aylof should stop up and sufficiently build up with stone and lime, before the end of this term, a certain door opening into the garden of the Inn, and that he should not in future go to the house of Margaret Halle in Holbourne but should altogether refrain from going there; provided that if he should marry, that then he might pull down the said wall if he should wish to do so, and re-open the said door; and that Percival Lampton should pay such fine as the Society should thereafter assess.

July 6. William Jenney was admitted and pardoned three

* Apparently they did not do so; see post, fo. 25.

June 15. John Carmynawe, special admission, at the instance fo. 26. of William Aylofe; he paid 20s.

Trinity Term, 9 Henry VII, 1494. Memorandum that on divers occasions this term James Hobert, the King’s Attorney, and all the other Governors and all the existing Benchers, to the number of fourteen, assembled in the Chapel of the Inn, in order to amend the good rule, usefulness and profit of the Society of Lincoln’s Inn, so that it may continue for ever; and they recited amongst other matter the forms following, that is to say: That whereas formerly divers of the Society, as well Benchers as others, had been admitted to repasts in consideration of divers small sums of money paid to the Society, by which admissions grave damage had accrued to the Society; [first] because the moots and other means of instruction [erudiciones] were very often not observed, through the absence of such of the Bench as had been so admitted, who were rarely at supper [ad canes]; so that those occasions were derogatory, prejudicial and detrimental to the Society; [and secondly] because when those who had not been admitted to repasts were absent and dining in the city, they were obliged by the customs of the Inn to pay by the week just as those did who dined in the Inn every day. Thereupon, after good deliberation had in the premises by the said James Hobert and all other the Governors and Fellows of the Bench.

* The arithmetic is faulty.
† This term, used here and subsequently for the sake of compression, means that the new Fellow is pardoned all vacations, with or without an admission to repasts.

It was ordained that no one of the Society previously admitted to repasts should henceforth enjoy the said admission to repasts, but should in future be precluded from any advantage thereof, except the said James Hubert [sic] who had previously lent divers sums of money for the re-building of the Hall (of which loan £3 are still due to the said James by the Society), and who gave £7 for his said admission; except also the King's servants who are named on the Roll of the Exchequers; and except also the servants of the lords who are generally at table with their lords, and this for the time when the lords are staying in or near the City.

Provided always that if any of the servants of the King or any other lords shall sleep within the Inn for three nights in a week, they and each of them shall be charged half commons for that week as often as it shall happen.

And to further the said ordinance so made for the benefit of the Inn, John Botiller senior, one of the Ancients of the Bench, [unus antiquiorum de Banco], and Robert Drury, who were formerly admitted to repasts for certain considerations, of their own accord and wish renounced all their interest and claim in the same admissions.

It is also ordained that no one shall hereafter be admitted to repasts in time of vacation, but only in term time, when the Governors and Fellows of the Bench meet in the Chapel.

It is also ordained that no Barrister shall have or maintain the servant of another in commons.

Also that no Barrister [Barista] shall have a servant in commons or a pot,* except only when he himself is in commons.

Also that in future no one shall be admitted either to Bench or Bar except in full term, and by the advice and discretion of the Governors for the time being, and of all other Benchers then being in the Inn.

* The liberatura referred to on pp. 49, 74, 81, 86, 87 and 98; it consisted of a pot of ale or beer with bread, apparently by way of supper. It is afterwards called a' bo yer.' See post, passim.
It is also ordered that John Mynors (40d.), William Ayllyf (2s.), and Richard Eryngton (2s.) do pay fines to be assessed at the discretion of the Governors and Benchers for not keeping or preparing the moots for two days, as they ought, after the said term, when divers Benchers were prepared to hear moots.

Ordered that Humfrey Segiswyk be excused of the office of Marshal on payment of £4.

Ordered that Robert Drury shall have £4 from the Society on account of the sums spent by him on the repair of his chamber: Provided always that the pensions due by him may be deducted therefrom; (which £4 were paid to him in November, 12 Henry VII, 1496).*

Ordered that Roger Fitz, who holds the office of Attorney in the "Gyldhall” of the City of London, as long as he fills that office, shall pay half commons weekly as long as the Court sits, and not more nor otherwise.

October 25. Thomas Hobard was admitted to repasts by the Governors and Benchers present in the Chapel according to the form of the ordinance; he paid 20s.

October 25. William Smyth was admitted to the Society and pardoned all vacations; he paid 20s.

If he does not keep the next vacation, he shall pay for the two not kept, 40s. [He kept the next Autumn vacation, fo. 62.]

Agreed by the Governors and Benchers:
Whereas very often [multociens] for lack of good and diligent study on the part of the Fellows at the Utter Bar, the instruction of the moot is of no profit to the students or the hearers, and on various occasions issue has been joined between them;
And doubts in the moots, put, as of old, to the great instruction [of the students], were not shown nor understood by reason of the said default, to the great detriment of the hearers and the students of the Society;

The cause of which appears to be in the Fellows at the Inner Bar,* because the moot is not taken nor written by any of them at the time of its assignment, nor is it delivered to the Fellows of the Utter Bar at a fitting time, so that they may have profitable study thereof, as the ancient use was:

Therefore, to emend and correct this great defect, it is agreed that if the moot, at the time of its assignment, be not written by two of the Inner Bar at least, then all of the Inner Bar, being in commons, shall pay 12d. for each default; Provided always that if one only shall write it, he shall be discharged from the penalty;

And when it is written, it shall be taken, by two of those writing it, to those of the Utter Bar, before mass on the following day, under the like penalty;

And if they of the Utter Bar refuse to receive the moot, so offered to them, before the end of mass, then each of them of the Utter Bar, being in commons, shall lose 20d. for each default.

Bradbury was put out of commons for striking the Pannierman at dinner time in sight of the Governors; fine, 20d.

two tapers in the Chapel, called ‘standers,’* with 4 lbs. of wax, according to ancient custom.

Walter Rowdon is pardoned 6s. 8d. of his fine of 26s. 8d. for refusing the office of Butler, a° 19 Hen. VII.

Jan. 20, 1505. Christofer Baynbrigge, Master or Keeper of the Rolls, was admitted at the instance of William Barons, Bishop of London, and pardoned all vacations.

July 20, 1504. Edward Forset was admitted; he forfeited two vacations after his admission, viz:—Autumn, Christmas and Easter [sic].

Feb. 2, 1505. Miles Hubbert, the fourth, was admitted, and pardoned four vacations, the rest to be kept in three years.

Nov. 20, 1503. — Laurens was admitted; he lost four vacations, Christmas, Autumn, Christmas and Easter.

Feb. 28, 1505. Richard Segiswyk was put out of commons for assaulting Statham, one of the Butlers of the Inn, with his drawn sword. March 3, he was re-admitted on submission; fined 3s. 4d.

April 20, 1505. John Bolmar was admitted and pardoned five vacations, [the rest] within 3 years.

April 14, 1505. John Lyghtfote was admitted, and pardoned six vacations; the remaining three to be kept within three years, under a penalty of 26s. 8d. for each vacation not kept.

Richard Eryngton is elected Autumn Reader; if he make default he shall be fined £10 without pardon and John Skewys shall be Reader.

Blyth was put out of commons and out of his chamber, because he refused to obey the order of John Wood, the Treasurer and one of the Governors, that he should be put out of commons, but he remained in commons in contempt of the Governors, a pernicious example hereafter. Re-admitted on his obedience; fine 2od.

William Honychurch fined 2od. for breaking the door of the kitchen out of cheek.†

Feb. 20, 1505. William Hawles was admitted, and pardoned five vacations, the remaining four to be kept within four years.

and by agreement with the Governors, were admitted to Alen’s chamber, saving to him the right of being in the chamber, whenever he happens to stay or sleep there. They gave the Society 13s. 4d.

Richard Segiswyke fined 2od. for maintaining Bulman in wrong-doing towards Brewning, by encouraging and contumelious words, when he ought to have reproved him.

Edward Thornborough, John Stone, Thomas Tempest, Robert Thornborough and Edmund Lee, Utter Barristers, were fined 3s. 4d. each, for not taking a case; on account of their default the moot fell through on the second day of Easter Term, 1505.

June 27, 1505. Mattok, Hubbert the fourth, Froxmer,* Pledell, Brennyng, Studvyle and Norres, were put out of commons for watching [vigilaverunt] with swords and clubs in the middle of the night, and having a strife and affray with the Society of Gray’s Inn, in scandal of this Society. Brennyng, Norres and Studvyle went away, and would not come before the Governors and the Society to be examined, so they are each fined 3s. 4d. The others submitted themselves, and were each fined 2od.

William Halke, with the consent of the Governors and Fellows, was admitted to the chamber late John Nedersale’s, for life; and no other Fellow shall hereafter be admitted with him.

July 20, 1505. William Malom, one of the Masters of the Court of the King’s Chancery, was admitted, and pardoned all vacations, and admitted to repasts; he gave a hogshead of wine; at the instance of John Skewys, [Autumn Reader].

not yet been examined, because he was not in commons at the time of the examination.

Brennyng was charged with the like offence. He has not yet been examined, because he was put out of commons for non-payment of his commons.

Studvile and Verney were put out of commons for consenting to this misbehaviour within the Inn. Fined 3s. 4d. each.

Aug. 8, 1505. Doctor Thomas Hobbis, Dean of the Church of S. Stephen ['Peter' written over] at Westminster,* was admitted, and pardoned all vacations, at the instance of the Bishop of London. He gave 20s.

William Honychurch was put out of commons for drawing his dagger [armicudium] on the Chaplain of the Inn in Hall. Fined 3s. 4d.

John Nethersale, late one of the Society, from the good will that he had to the Society, gave and left 40 marks that the Society might build or newly erect [edificaret sive de novo erigeret] the Library within the Inn, to the increase of learning and the study of the law of England within the Inn; also that the present and every future Chaplain of the Inn celebrating mass and other divine services [et alia divina] there, shall celebrate every Friday for ever a requiem mass for the soul of the said John Nethersale, and that the said Chaplain shall, at the time of the said mass, before the first washing [locio] or rinsing [lavatoria],† for the soul of the said John, say the Psalm de Profundis, with the prayers [oracionibus] and collects, as the manner is. And the Governors and Fellows of the Inn fixedly appointed, and agreed to fulfill and observe, this ordinance for all times to come, and that the present Chaplain of the Inn and the future Chaplains celebrating divine service there, shall take oath before the Governors of the Inn for the time being, well and faithfully to observe all the premises on his part. These being witnesses, James Hobert, Knight, John Newport, William Wadham and John Roper, now Governors of the Inn.

* S. Stephen's is no doubt correct, as there were no Deans of S. Peter's until 1540. Hobbes was installed Dean of Windsor in 1507, and died there in 1509. He was also a Master in Chancery.

Master of the Revels: Willoughby junior. In his default, Tirrell; and Willoughby is fined 26s. 8d.
Escheator: Colnet.
Christmas Steward: Parker.

Henry Saunders and Walter Rowdon are admitted by the fo. 81. Governors to aid and advise the Fellowship of the Bench for the good governing of the Inn, but not to vote [sed non quoad vocem].† Saunders and Rowdon have votes [voces]; see Book 3, fol. 53 and 66.‡

Dec. 20, 1505. Richard Irton admitted, and pardoned five vacations in three years.
Feb. 20, 1506. — Milett was admitted, and pardoned all vacations; he gave a hogshead of claret wine in the time of quinquagesima and in the time of William Aylot, Lent Reader.
May 1, 1506. Nicholas Terr[y] admitted, and pardoned five vacations in three years.
Feb. 22, 1506. Christopher Mettford admitted, and pardoned four vacations; [the remainder] to be kept within three years.
April 20, 1506. Nicholas Eles admitted, and pardoned five vacations; the rest to be kept in three years.

May 20, 1506. Agreed by all the Bench that if anyone of fo. 82. the Society shall hereafter at any time carry out of Hall any cups or pots, or shall break them in Hall, without reasonable cause, (unless he be a Bencher), he shall pay for each cup or pot 12d.

Miles Hubbert fined 3s. 4d. for breaking the door of the "White Hert in Holbourne" at night, and beating the house-wife of the same, to the scandal of the Society, and also for frequenting a brothel [domus lupanaris] in Holburn, called "Johne Hasylrykke's Hous."

* The first time this officer is mentioned; in the previous year, 1504-5, he is called Master of the Chapel.
† Fellows admitted in this way were known as "Associates of the Bench."
‡ This is a marginal note. These references will appear post.
Forset, Verney and Bewmount, for the like, fined 3s. 4d. each.
Norwych and Studvyle fined 3s. 4d. each for frequenting the said brothel.
Blythe fined 2od. because he would not pay his dues [debita sua] to the Treasurer, but gave him unseemly and disobedient words.
Parker fined 12d. for throwing "wyspis"* in Hall during the drinking time [tempore le boyer] in an insolent way in the grammar school.†
Norwich, Freynes, Meynors, Jenney IV, Bulmer, Carewe, Froxmer, Batmanson, Hubber[t] IV, Norreys, Forset, Studvyle, Mitford, Beumont, Blith and Verney, each fined 12d. for the like.

Resolved by the Benchers, that when any one of the Society hereafter shall be put out of commons and fined for any offence, he shall not be re-admitted until the fine be paid.
Resolved by the Benchers that in future no one may be at clerks' commons unless he exercise himself about the study of the law of the land; and that he be decorously clad, and not with his shirt in public view [in facie populi] beyond his doublet [ultra diploidem] at his neck. Under pain of being removed from those commons to the Masters' commons. This statute shall begin at the feast of S. Peter ad vincula [Aug. 1] next.

Nov. 5, 1506. John Brampton admitted, and pardoned all vacations, for certain great considerations; he shall be at Masters' commons at once [incontinenter].

July 8, 1506. Agreed by the Society that John Leke shall henceforward be at repasts, paying the Society for them 40s.; if he shall lie three nights in the Inn, then he shall be in commons, and shall pay half commons in the Inn; he shall not have his drink [Boyar suum] in the Inn as Benchers and Barristers have; he shall serve and exercise his office by his clerks within the Inn.

June 4, 1506. Dr. Hare was admitted, and pardoned all vacations; he shall be at repasts; he gave a hogshead of wine for the next Autumn vacation; at the instance of Walter Stubbe [Autumn Reader].

Nov. 1, 1506. John Acclom was admitted and pardoned all vacations; he paid 20s.

* This probably refers to the rushes strewn on the floor.
† The text is quite clear. It looks as though some kind of instruction other than legal was given in the Hall in the evening.
Jan. 20, 1507. William Bound was admitted, and pardoned four vacations without any condition, and a fifth shall be pardoned if William can show any cause why he cannot conveniently keep it; he shall keep the rest within three years.

Poleyn, Clerke and Freynes were fined 3s. 4d. each, because they refused to moot at Michaelmas Term, 1506.

Preston, Rokeby senior and junior, Marchall, Tate, Poleyn, Thornburgh junior, Freynes, and Hobart junior, were fined 3s. 4d. each, for the like on another occasion in the same term.

Agreed by the Governors and Benchers assembled in the Chapel, that Rodeney, knight, Coket, and Hugh Croft, shall be discharged of all their arrears of pensions, for 20s. each.

Robert Lee, the like, for 40s.

Whereas Robert Lee and Rouland Wytton were admitted to Richard Blount's late chamber in the time of Robert Tate, then Pensioner; it is now agreed by the Governors and Benchers that Lee shall have the seniority in the chamber, and that Wytton shall give place to him according to the custom of the Inn.

Ralph Rokeby, Thomas Tempest, Robert Thornburgh, Rokeby III, Robert Preston, Robert Tate and William Freynes, Utter Barristers, were fined 2od. apiece for not taking a case, whereby the moot fell through on Feb. 7, 1507.

Whereas very many persons in many places have died at the beginning of this [autumn] vacation, through the infection of the atmosphere, to the no small danger of the Society, then being here, And whereas also many of the Society, sick of the said illness, were bound to keep the said vacation, coming from distant parts; Therefore it is agreed by the Society that all within their vacations who are in commons in the week of the Sunday next after the feast of S. Peter ad vincula, shall be discharged from the said vacation, and that it shall be allowed them as one vacation; And that all others within their vacations, who are not then in commons in that vacation, shall be discharged thereof, but shall keep another in place of it.*

* Twenty-four kept it, and only one made default.

S. Martin's Eve, 1516.

Granted that "Lobbe le Folet" may have tunic, hose and boots [?; botular] from the Treasurer of the Inn, to be paid for by the Treasurer.

Granted that every one of the Society may be in commons on Saturday at supper.

Ordered that Harvey shall have seniority over Waldyff and Ingeram at the Utter Bar because he was called first.

Holles is warned to come to the next Council to answer for wounding Lobbe; [the Fool, see above].

November 25th, 1516.

George Treheron is in arrear with his pensions although being in commons, contrary to rule. He promised to pay before the feast of the Purification. He often excuses himself by his wife [per uxorem], saying that sometimes he is in town and sometimes not.

It was also alleged of him that Vaghan was admitted through him, and that he left indebted to the Society, with all his goods. To this he [Treheron] said that he had not undertaken [to be responsible] for him [Vaghan], but he said that the servant of Sir Hugh Vaghan, knight, would pay, or else he [Treheron] would.

* Probably a clerical error for botellos or botulos, boots.
It was also alleged that he was defendant in a process of exigent; to which he answered that this was at the suit of Cradoke, and unjust, because the debt was due by his wife’s first husband, and that he was not indebted to any other.

As to the commons and pensions of Lancaster, it is agreed that the Treasurer shall recover what is due for commons and shall pardon the residue, and that the Pensioner shall recover against him the half [?] if the debt be under the sum of 40s.; but if it be over, then he shall pay 20s. whatever is due.

To this Council came Richard Smyth, Chief Butler of the Inn, and produced the Butler’s books, in which it did not appear that there remained any bread or ale, contrary to the ancient custom. Therefore every Butler is in mercy.

The Purification, February 2nd, 1517.

All and singular who in future are admitted to any chambers in the new building shall pay 40s. each, but Benchers shall have preference over others.

February 8th, 1517.

No one of the Society shall henceforth have any clerk within the Inn at yeomen’s commons [ad communes vaelect], except Benchers and Utter Barristers, without having special license. Provided that Benchers may have two clerks if they please. Every one else may have one clerk for 2s. a week, or at 3d. for a dinner and as much for supper.

Ralph Rokeby and Thomas Willughby amerced 40d. each for going from the Council without leave. Vacated by order of the Governors.

Richard Clerk was allowed to go before the end of the vacation, namely, at the end of the 2nd week of Lent, because he was retained in divers assizes [retentus est cum diversis assisis] at Lincoln. He shall pay his commons for the whole vacation, and it shall count as a vacation.

February 11th, 1517.

Norwiche, the late Marshal, was amerced 6s. 8d. for excessive expenditure of wine last Christmas.

Cholmeley, the late Butler, was amerced 10s. for the like, and for exercising bad government in the Inn at the said time in breaking the doors of chambers by reason of “Jake Stray.”

George Treheron was dismissed the Society for his very many misdeeds, until, on his humble petition to the Governors, it may be otherwise ordered.
Feb. 12, 1517. William Drury was admitted at the instance of Robert Drury, Knight, his father; he was pardoned all vacations and offices within the Inn, except his vacations at the Bar or the Bench; he may be at repasts; he may have a servant at yeomen's commons [communes valectorum]; he shall have bread and drink from the Buttery [promptuarius] as Utter Barristers have; for this Robert Drury gave the salary of a Chaplain to celebrate within the Inn for ever.

Feb. 2, 1517. Richard Eggecombe, son and heir of Peter Eggecombe, Knight, was admitted and pardoned six vacations, the remaining three to be kept within the three next years; but if Richard shall be in the King's service within the said three years, or if he shall make default in keeping the three vacations, then he shall be discharged from keeping them on payment of 10s.

March 1, 1517. John Heryng was admitted and pardoned all vacations at the instance of Thomas Tempest, the Reader; he may be at repasts at his pleasure and shall be freed from all offices; he gave 26s. 8d. for a hogshead of wine.

March 1, 1517. William Bulmer, knight, gave the Society a hogshead of claret wine in Lent, and sent it to the Inn, not knowing any member of the Society,* and prayed that he might be admitted. At his desire, and at the instance of —— Bulmer, his son, and on account of his apparent goodwill to the Society, he was admitted and pardoned all vacations; he may be at repasts at his pleasure, and is freed from all offices in the Inn.

May 19th, 1517.

"Md that who so bryngith any repaster to the Redar's denar or sopar, except the Redar or any of the Benche, schall pay for the repast, xijd."

The Keeper of the Black Book fined 3s. 4d. for his default.

Ascension Day, 1517.

"Item, it is agred that Harvy schall haue oute of the Tresury iijs. iiiijd. towards the losse of the vessell at such tyme as he was the Stuard at the Redar's Denar in Lent last past."

Treheyron,† who had been put out of commons for various offences "done by hym to the slaunder of the house," is re-admitted upon condition "that he shall agree w† Willm Buttrye, Cormongar, the Proctour of the Charterhouse, and pay his duties of the house

Autumn Vacation, 1520.

The following gentlemen were amerced for a doe [dama] seized and taken away at the Gate of Lincoln’s Inn from a certain poor man who was coming to speak with Danastre, and who left his horse standing at the Gate, bearing the said doe: Master Curzon, 3s. 4d.; Master Tounesend, 2od.; Master Burgh, 3s. 4d.; Master Lane, 2od.; Master Smyth, 2od.; Master See, 2od.; Master Menell, 2od.; Master Talbot, 2od. Of these sums, 14s. was given to Master Sulyard for the building of the new Gate; the rest was given to the poor man in satisfaction for his doe.*

George Treheyron and 13 others paid 26s. 8d. each to the use of the Society for their pensions to become due after July 20. 1520.

* The fines amount to 16s. 8d.; so the ‘poor man’ only received 2s. 8d.
Master Stubbes* was called to the Council and Society, and fo. 97. pardoned all vacations, burdens, offices and attendances; he gave 53s. 4d.

Autumn Vacation, 1520.
Three Benchers were amerced for leaving the day before the Reader's supper, one 13s. 4d., and two 3s. 4d.; one Bencher was amerced 20d. because he was absent twice.

Treheyron shall henceforth be at his repasts "in the meane fo. 98. vacations out of the terme and out of the lernyng vacations, and if he lye w'in the hows three nyghtes, then he to be in half comys"; for this liberty he remitted the 6s. 8d. due to him for his Marshal's allowance.

Oct. 28, 1520. Lynsell, late Butler, is admitted of the Company, "w' all liberties and priveleges after the old custum vsed for officers."

Richard Marchall is assigned to the chamber that Master Woode "dyede in, w'owte any fyne or any othir thyng payng for the same, in consideracion of suche laburs and paynes that William Marchall, his fathir, hathe and intendith to take for the cumpany of Lyncoln's Inne."

Fridaye in the 28 daye of January, beyng the first daye of Hillary terme, in the mornyng, dyed the moste excellent, victoriou and noble Kyng, of famous memory, Kyng Henry the eyght, at his paleys at Westminster, upon whoes sowle Ihesus have mercy!

And uppon the Mondaye next followyng, which was the 31 daye of the seid moneth, in the mornyng abowe 9 of the clock, there stode in the paleys yarde, a payre of buttes lenghte distant from Westminster Hall, lokyng toward Westminster Halle, 5 or 6 Herauldes in there cote armers; and then immediatly there came rydyng oute of Westminster Halle the Archebisshoppe of Caunterbury, the lorde Wriothesley, lorde Chauncelors of Englane, the lord SayntJohn, lorde greate Master,* the lorde Russell, lorde Privey Seale, the lorde Lisle, Lorde Admiralle of England, the Bishopp of Durham, w* many other as well lorde as gentlemen, to the seid Herauldes; and then oone of the same Herauldes, in the presence of the seid lordes and afoe a great multitude of people there beyng assembled, dyd openly reade a commissyon under the great Seale in the name of kyng Edward the SYXT, rehersyng the daye and houre of the deathe of the seid Kyng Henry the eyght, his moste dere father; therefore he, takyng uppon hym, as of ryght moste justly and lawfully he mowght doo, to be Kyng of this realme and of all other the Kyngdomes, Dominyons, Ryghtes and Titles, &c., whych late were Kyng Henry the viijth his father, dyd there straitly charge and commawnde all his subjectes that his peace myghte be surely kept, &c.; the same commision was dated at Westm* the seid 31 daye of January in the first yeere of the seid Kyng Edward the SYXTE’s reigne. And then all the people cryed ‘God save the Kyng.’ And so all the lordes departed, and dyd ryde from thens to the paleys at Westminster.

“And the same Mondaye at afternoone the Kinge’s Magestie, Edward the Syxt, was conducted to the Tower of London by the Erle of Hertford, his grace’s moste deerly beloved uncle, and other noble menne, from Hunsdon in Hertfordshire, where he before dyd lye.

And the seid Mondaye all plees ceassed at Westminster.

And in the after noone of the same daye, the Kynges’s Magestie, in the presence of many his lordes and noble menne, made the seid Erle of Hertford Protectors of all his realmes and dominyons, and Governores of his grace’s person; the Kyng then beyng but of the age of ix yeeres and xv weekes, or ther aboute.

At the seid dynner the hyghe table was furnysshed principally \textsuperscript{t} my seid lorde Chauncelo and other noblemenne, lorde and gentlemenne of woorship and good calyng. At the second table, being on the northe syde of the seid Halle, dyd sytt my seid lorde Mayer, w\textsuperscript{t} the Aldermen, Shirefes of the Citie, and divers other gentlemen, as M. Carrell, Attorney of the Duchye, M. Chidley, Attorney of the Tenthes, w\textsuperscript{t} soche other of woorshipfull calyng. The third boorde, of the south syde of the seid Halle, was ryght woorshipfully and cumly furnysshed w\textsuperscript{t} the sage Judges of the lawe, the moste notable and profownde cownselors, the olde Serjeauntes, and the twoo expert, discrete, grave and deepe stodyed menne yn the seid lawes, s., M. Bradshawe of the Inner Temple, the Kyng's Generall Attorney, and M. Griffyn of Lincolnes Ynne, the Kyng's Magestie's Generall Sollicito. At the fourthe boorde, on the seid South syde of the Hall, dyd orderly sytt upon the Benche, all of oone syde, the seid newe made Sergeauntes, every of them in their auncheunte. At the fiftthe table, on the seid north syde of the seid Halle, dyd sytt Gentlemen of a meaneer calyng.

The Hall being thus furnysshed, the Benchers of Lincolnes Ynne dyd see the seid dynner in good course served, and then they themselves furnished uppe the table in the myddes of the Halle, toward the lower ende therof, commawndyng certen other gentlemen of Lincolnes Ynne, of the moste sobre and wyse sorte, to several places in the Halle appoynted, to wayte and attende all the seid dynner to the service therof; which w\textsuperscript{t} all diligens they executed accordingly.
And when dynner was solemnly finisshed, the lorde Chauncelo, w th'other lorde, departed from Lincolnes Ynne, abowte twoo in the clock in the after noone.

And w'yn an howre after, the seid newe Sergeantunes went to Paule's, and there eche of them stode at their severall pillers in the body of the church, accordyng to the auncyent custome in that case used;* and from thens they came to Sergeantunes Ynne, every of them to their severall chambers, and there remayned.

And thus ended this honorable Sergeantunes feaste, w all the circumstauces and proces, moche to their prayse worshippe and perpetuall fame, woorthy commendacion.

And it is farther to be remembred that the twoo newe Sergeantunes of Lincholnes Yn, s., M. Meynell and M. Morgan, the nyght before they were made Sergeantunes, were called into the Chappell of Lincholnes Ynne, and there, after an ornate oracion made to them by the ryght worshipfull M. Baron Pilbarowghe in the presence of my Masters of the Benche and all the cumpany of the gentleman and of the Felaweship of the seid Howse, every of the seid Sergeantunes had then to hym delyvered in the name of the seid whole Felaweshippe, as of their free gyfte and rewarde towards their charges, vjli. in a purse; which was gathered of all the cumpany of the Howse, and a good summe bysydes, which was delyvered to M. Forster, Treasurer of Lincholnes Ynne; which money was payde after the rate of xld. every gentleman; wherof my Masters of the Benche payd nothing, nor were contributary to the same.*

Memorandum, that the aforesaid Kyng Edward the Syxt, lyeng still in the Tower of London, and the lorde Protecto* ther attendaunt uppon his grace's person, in the Sondaye the xiijth daye of the seid moneth of February, by a commissyon made under the Great Seale unto the seid lorde Protecto, he, the seid lorde Protecto, dubbed the seid Kyng knyghte; and after, w'yn the space of halfe an howre, the Kynges Magestie there made Henry Hubberthorne, then Mayer of London, fyrst Knighte, and then his grace secondly made Willyham Portman, oone of the Justices of the Kynges Benche, knighte also.

And in the Mondaye next followyng, which was the xiiijth daye of February, the corps of the aforesaid Kyng Henry the eyght was moste solemnely and honorably conveyed towards Wyndesore, w a great nombre of noblemenne, lorde, gentlemen, the lorde Mayer, w a great cumpany of officers, ministers, and others, all in black gowns or black coats. And at Windsore, in the Wednesdaye next after, beyng the xvijth of February, the seid corps was there ceremonially and moste godly interred and buryed.

And uppon the Thursdaye followyng next after the foreseid buryall, being the xvijth daye of February, the Kynges Magestie, Edward the Syxt, in the seid Tower of London, dyd create and make oone Duke, oone Marques, twoo Earles, and fowre Barons or lordes, s., Fyrst, the seid Earle of Hertford, lord Protecto\textsuperscript{r} and then lorde Great Chaumberlen of England, was created Duke of Somerset, and made lorde Highe Treasourer of England and Earle Marshall of the same. Second, the lorde Parre, Earle of Essex, was create Marques of Northamton. Thirdely, the lorde Lysle, then lorde Admirall, was created Earle of Warwyke, and made lorde Great Chaumberlen of England. Fourtyly, the lorde Wriothesley, lord Chauncelo\textsuperscript{r} of England, was created Earle of Southampton. Fiftly, Sr Thomas Seymer, the seid Kynges other uncle, was made lorde Seymer of Suydley and lorde Admirall of England. And then Sr Richard Riche, knyghte, was made lorde
Ryche; and then Sr Willyham Willoughby was made lorde Willoughby of Parham, and lastly Sr Edmond Sheffeld, knighte, was made lorde Sheffield.

And uppon the Saturdaye followyng, which was the xix\textsuperscript{th} daye of February aforesaid, the Kynges Highnes, Edward the Syxt, most princely in his owne person, my lord Protecto\textsuperscript{r} and all the other noble menne and lordes, as well spirituall as temporall, w\textsuperscript{t} many menne of woorship and gentlemen, and all other officers and ministers, gyving their attendaunce, every oone accordyng to his estate, degree and callyng, dyd farther in executyng their offices and dutyes for that tyme use as well uppon their bodies as on their horses and mules sumptuous apparell, moche to the Kynges's hono\textsuperscript{r}, and so discended from the Tower, thoroughe all the Citie of London to his grace's paleys at Westminster, the lively syght of whomes most stately and royall person was to the inestimable rejoysyng and comforte of all us, his grace's trewe, faythful, lovyng and obedyent subjectes.

The Kinge's most imperyall coronacion, and the feaste.

Upon the next daye, which was Shrove Sondaye and the xx\textsuperscript{th} daye of February, the seid Kinges Highnes, w\textsuperscript{t} all solempnyte, mooste royally and imperially was crowned Kyng, w\textsuperscript{t} all due ceremonyes and circumstaunces belongingyng to the same, in Westminster Churche aboute x of the clock in the forenoone of the same daye. And about xij of the clock the same daye, the Kynges most royall Magestie, Edward the Syxt, came in to Westminster Halle, and there then the feaste of his Highnes' coronacion was w\(^t\) all liberalyte moste magnificently observed.

At which seid daye of the Coronacion and in the twoo dayes next followyng, were made a hundred knightes or theraboute.

Alsoo in the seid ij dayes, s., Shrove Mondaye and Shrove Tuysdaye, were great and solempne justes and turney kept in the seid paleys at Westminster, where my lorde Seymer of Suidley, lorde Admirall of England, oone of the Kings seid Magestic's deerly beloved uncles, and the chief challynger, being but vj [challengers] in nombre, at all assayes in every of the justes and turney prospered moste honorably.

Rownde abowte the place of which seid justes and turney were scaffoldes and stondynges made, where the Felaweshippe and cumpany of Linclorne's Ye ne had a stondyng by themselves, the more quietly to viewe the seid justes and turney, and payed for the same vli. to the Keper of the Paleys at Westminster; and lyke stondyng was appoynted severally to ech Howse of Courte, and they allsoo payde, or owghte to have payde, a lyke summe of money for the same. And the seid vli., which was payed for Linclorne's Ynne, was gathered and collected of the whole cumpany and Felawshyppe, as well Benchers as others, by Mr. Rosecarrock the elldre, oone of the Utter Barrysters of the seid Howse of Linclorne's Ye ne, after the rate of xxd. the polle; and the surplusage thereof, amowntyng to a good summe of money, was, after accompte, taken by certen audito\(^r\) appoynted by the woorshipfull cumpany of the Benche there to Mr. Forster, then and there Treasourer; yn lyke maner as the overplus of the newe Sergeauntes' rewardes uppon their seid newe eleccion, and the nyght before their departure from Linclorne's yinne, collected by Mr. Rastell, oone of the cumpany of the seid Benche, was deleyvered to the Treasourer aforesaid.

And thus finally this notable coronacion of the moste woorthy and indolent [sic] Prynce and Kyng, Edward the Syxt, o\(^r\) naturall and moste dradde sovereigne lorde, w\(^t\) all the preparacion and sequele thereof, had prosperows successe, and moste triumphantly ended, the xxij\(^t\) daye of February aforesaid, in the fyrst year of his grace's reigne and a\(^o\) d\(^i\), 1546[-7], whome of his endeles mercye I moste hertely beseche that his Highnes, the seid Edward the Syxt, long maye reigne over us, having victory over all his enemyes, and thorrowghe Godde's power and his divine assistance his Grace's Highnes maye bryng us, his Grace's lovyng and obedyent subjectes, to an uniformyte in all Godlynes, and thereyn to persever w\(^t\) all pure affecction, which undowtedly shalbe to the safegarde bothe of o\(^t\) bodies and sowles, to the great tranquillyte and quietnes of this realme, to the perpetuall and immortalle fame and hono' of the Kinges seid imperiall Magestie, Edward the Syxt, by the Grace of God, Kyng of England, Fraunce and Ireland, Defendo' of the Faythe, and in earthe of the Churche of Englannde and allso of Ireland Supreme Heade, and chiefly moste agreeable to the pleasure and commawndement of Allmghtie God, author of all unyte and goodnes, to whome be oonly hono' and glory, worlde w'oute ende. Amen. Amen.*

* "An aid, a contribution, or collection in aid"; N.E.D., s.v. commorth. "Subsidium a pluribus collatum"; Spelman, Gloss., s.v. comortha. The word is a Welsh one, and its use in England seems to have been almost confined to documents relating to Wales. It is therefore somewhat remarkable to find it used here.
† John Carnesewf, Cornesewf or Carsewe. There is no entry of his admission. His name first appears in the list of those who ought to keep the Autumn Vacation, 1554. Book IV, fo. 282.
The Earl of Rutland* shall have his choice of any of the new chambers with the rooms belonging thereto, for £30, though others may offer more; for the good-will that he and his ancestors have shown to the House.

No chamber in the new building shall be assigned for less than £20, and not more than two Fellows shall be assigned to any one chamber. They shall hold them for their lives.

Benchers may be transferred to the new chambers if they please, but the Inn must not lose thereby.

Mr Chiverton senior,† Mr Ryches, and Mr Filmer, shall be "associat to the Bench," paying for their fines, the two first £10 each, the last £6 13s. 4d.; they shall not have any voice in Council until it be determined at some future Council; all Readers shall have preferment in place before them.

Mr Ayloff, the Bencher, shall have one of the new chambers in lieu of his old one, now pulled down, without any payment, except "the glasing and making of hys studye."

Council held on June 8th, 1567.

Fifteen Benchers present, including Riches and Filmer.

Mr Kingsmill, who is due to do his second Reading next Lent, is very sickly; ordered that he shall Read, but "he shall use so meny dayes in his Reding tyme, according to his own discresion, as he may beare without daunger of further sicknes."

wourshipfull, St Willyam Cordell, knigthe, M' of the Rolles, vnto the Benchars of this Howse, the tennor off which letter followith in theise woordes, viz:

"After my righte hartie comendacions. Wheare it hathe pleased the Right Honnourable and my verie good Lordes, the Lord Highe Thesaurer of Englande and th'earle of Leicester, and likewise my verrie honnorabile good freind, St Walter Mildmay, knight, Chauncellour of Her Majsie's Courte of the Exchequer, to adresse their seuerall letters vnto me requiringe me thearyby to yeald my goodwill vnto M' Spencer, a Fellowe of yo' Howse, and to his brother, for the use of my chamber; which (with my very hartie thankes) I must confesse to have enjoyed of longe tyme by your good tolleration and sufferance. And albeit I am very loth to lose the benefitt therof, whereby I may seeme to be excluded from the frendship of yo' Societie and Fellowship, which to my great comforte, I doo possesse, and have donn notwithstandinge I am not dailie conversaunt amongst you, besides the pleasure I have therby to gratifie somm of my frendes.

Yet in respect their Honno's have so earnestly required my consent to depart with my said chamber to the said Mr. Spencers, And for that my Lorde Thesaurer also signified vnto me that he wold in lyke sorte recommende the suite vnto you, And whether his Lordship hath so donn or no I knowe not, I have thought good, (for the satisfaction of their Honnorabile Requestes, and for the good lykinge and hope I have conceyved of the towardnes of the younge gentlemen, and for dyvers of their frendes sake, who have also required that M' Bramthweite, another Fellowe of yo' Howse, might be joyned in this admyttance), to pray and require you to geve yo' consent to admitt them three into my said chamber, as for my part I am verie well contented you shall so doo.

"Neuerthelesse, my harty requeste vnto you is, and so the the said gentlemen arr agreed, that in the said admittance there may be a speciall reservacion made, That if for any caunce herafter I shall fortune to repaire thether againe and retoure to yo' Howse and be in Commons amongst you, that I shall not be excluded from the vse of the inner chamber, to lye there as longe as I shall so contynewe there in commons, with free egresse and regresse to the same for myne owne self and two of my servauntes, because I have ever made reconinge (and so mynde to continewe, by yo' favo') to be a member of that Societie and Fellowship duringe my life. Fare ye hartly well.

"Rolles; this xxviiith of April, 1578."

"And wheras also there was after another letter directed from the said Mr of the Rolles to the said Benchers in theis wordes following, viz:—

"After my right hartie commendaciones. Wheareas I wratt my letter vnto you about the xxvijth or xxviiith of the last moneth, att the requeast of somm of my verie honorabole good Lordes and frendes, to admit into my chamber ther Mr Spencer, a Fellowe of yo' Howse, and his brother, sonnes to my very good freinde, St John Spencer, knight, and also Mr Bramthweite, another Fellowe of the same; And though (for myne owne parte) I did verely presume that you hadd or this tyme satisfied their LL. [Lordships'] desire and my request therin, according to ye tenno' of my said former letters, and therby both their LL. and I sholde have hadd cause only to thank you, and not to trouble you any further in this matter; Yet yesterdaie, vpon the receipte of the lyke letters from the Right Honorable and my verie good Lorde, the Lorde Hunsdon, written in the behalf of the said Mr Spencers, I am eftsoones to call vpon you for a resolute awnsweare of my said former letters, partly to th'ende I may acquaint their LL. with it accordingly, but cheifly that I may knowe therby howe farr I stand beholdinge vnto you in satisfieing so reasonable a request.

"Trustinge I shall neither have cause to infourme their LL. of any lacke of good devotion on yo' partes to plesure them (consideringe I have already yealded vnto their Honnors my consent thervnto), Nor myself to doubt of the integritie of yo' frendshippes towards me, or to conceyve any suspicion or jealousie therof.

"Thus expecting yo' speedie awnsweare to this and my said former letters, I bydd you all hartely farewell.

"Rolles; the iiiijth of May, 1578."

"In consideracion of the greate goodwill and loving kindenesse shewed allway by the right worshipfull the said Mr of the Rolles unto the Fellowship of this Howse," ordered that the two Spencers and Branthute be admitted to the said chamber on paying the usual fees, and reserving the interest of the Master of the Rolls as mentioned in his first letter.

Cir. 1572. "After our very hartie commendations: Where in the xjth yere of the Queene's Ma'tes reigne, in the Term of Easter,* we did by our lettres to the Auncyentes and Benchers of the Innes of Courte signifie what order was than taken in the Sterre Chambre for reformation of a sorte of persons, about that tyme detected to be in the same Houses, of disordred demeanor and perverse disposition, specially against the lawes and ordres ecclesiasticall of the Churche; whiche order, being at good length by our sayd lettres than declared and explanyd, we understand was for that tyme reasonably executed, to the reformation of som who weare therby profitably reconcyled, and to the expulsion and secluding of som others that weare so perverse, or rather seditiously bent to contynue in disordre, as by no conveyent persuasion they weare than reformyd. But after som tyme expyred (as we are now credibly infourmyd) the former disordres are revived, or rather increased, for lack partly of the contynuance of som of those ordres w'in the Houses by the Auncyentes and Benchers, and partly for that suche regarde hath not lately bene had by you, the Commissioners Ecclesiasticall, to understand of the sayd contempestes, as was necessary.

"Wherfore, considerying how necessary a mater yt ys to provyde that in those Houses consisting of so greate companyes, where properly obedience to lawes and observation of good orders shuld be professd, ye contrary therof not nouryshed, and that by suffrancse the mischefe may by the authors of suche contempestes be dispersed abrode in this Realm, and yt w't the more facilitie and danger also to increase where the offenders shall gather credit among the vulgar sorte by profession of the knowledge and execution of the common lawes of the relm-

"We have upon good deliberation thought yt very necessary that yo' Lordship and others, having suffycient authoritie from Her Ma'tes to see to the due execution of all the lawes ecclesiasticall, shuld heerof be infourmyd; And so we requyre you that you will speedily, before the end of this Term, send for som of the Auncyentes and Benchers of the discreetist and dulyfullyest of every House or Inne of Courte, and lykwyse for som of the Innes of Chauncery, and inquiere of the disordres in these kynd of causes

* See ante, pp. 365, 370, 371.
concernyng the observacion of the lawes ecclesiasticall and the rytes of the Churche; and as you shall fynde the same disordres lykely to be increased, so to consider how the same may be reasonably and speedily redressed, using therin as cause shall require, conference eyther w't the Lord Keper of the Greate Scale of England and the twoo Cheefe Justices, or any of them, to whom partly doth belong (as we understand) som regarde for the good ordering of the said Houses or Innes. And therupon, as far fourth as appartaynith to the authorytie of yo' Commission, to reform or otherwyse to correcte the parties offending, and to lymytt som good orders for the due servyce of God in those Houses, and to staye and reform the rest from the entrye into lyke offences. Wherin surely the wholel realm shall take no small proffytt, both for the hono' and servyce of God, and for the better administracion of lawes, and fynally by the gyving of a generall good example of obedience to the rest of the subjectes."

Burghley Papers; Lansdowne MS. 106, fo. 90.

[This document, which can be dated between Feb. 4th, 1573, (when Weekes and Thimbleby were called to the Bench), and Feb. 7th, 1574 (when six Barristers were called who are not included in the list), is almost certainly connected with the Orders of the Council printed on pp. 391 and 392, ante. The first of those orders forbids the admission of more Fellows than the existing chambers will accommodate, and also the building of any new chambers. It would thus be necessary to have a list of the Fellows of the Inn (excluding the students or Inner Barristers, who seem to have been distributed among the chambers of the Bench and Utter Bar), shewing those men who had ceased to reside in the Inn. Accordingly in this list we find 25 out of a total of 96 are marked with a "d" to signify "discontinuer." A few particulars are added in italics.]

Burghley Papers; Lansdowne MS. 106, fo. 93.

1581 Where wee have bene of longe tyme desirous to have a Preacher in o' Howse, like as is in other Howses of Court, and having made offer to dyvers, as to Mr Chaderton, Mr Reynoldes, and others, could not procure them thither by reason they are not willing to leave the places and charges they are in already; and therapon have at length chosen Mr Charke; We have thought good to acquaint the Bishope therwth, to th'end we might have his L[ordship's] allowaunce therin: who, although for his owne parte he doth very well lyke of Mr Charke for many good giftes in him, wherof also himselfe remembred some particulr and gave him his very good commendacions, yet he wished the LL. [Lords, i.e., the Privy Council] to be made acquainted therewith, to th'end y' their good allowaunce and approbacion might concurre with his for Mr Charke's better encouragement and contynuance in y' place. And forasmuche as we are desirous therof o'selves, and consider y' yow are (as we do so accompt yow) one of us, we have thought good to use yo'r good meanes in procuring some letter from yo'r Lordship and others to such effect as may seem good to their Lordships, Wherin we would have bene readie to have geven o' owne attendance, but y' we have so good and readie meane as yow are, on whom we are bold to laye this burden for this tyme. And so fare yow well.

Yo' loving freinds.''

"After o' hartie comendacions; Wher we are geven to understand that the Benche of Lincoln's Inne have made choise of late of Mr Charke to be their Preach', as other Howses of Cowrte have lykewise donne of others, and that yo' L., having been made acquaintid therewith (as in these cases we thinke it requisit), have desired, notwithstanding yo' owne good lyking, to have some signification of o' also; we, considering the great hope of good to be done by such meanes in those places, and understanding the habilitie of Mr Charke sufficiently for y't purpose, have thought good to ioyne o' good lykinge to yo's, to the furtherance of so good a service, as we hope this wilbe to God and to hir Majestie. And so we bidd yo' L. right hartily farewell. Yo' loving freinds.''

APPENDIX IX.

Egerton Papers, Camden Society, xii, 108.

Under this date, Camden* refers to the "new designs of the Pope, Spaniard, and the Guises for invading England," and speaks of the manner in which, "by Leicester's means," Associations were formed "by mutual vows, subscriptions and seals to prosecute to the death, as far as lay in their power, all those that should attempt anything against the Queen." Such an Association was formed at Lincoln's Inn, and the text of the declaration signed by the members is given in full at the above reference. The members pledged themselves to "faythfully serve and humbly obay our said soveraigne lady, Quene Elizabeth," and to "withstande, offende and pursue, as well by force of armes as by all other meanes of revenge, all maner of persons, of what estate soever they shalbe, and there abbetors, that shall attempte by any acte, counsell or consent to any thinge that shall tende to the harme of her Maie[nt]s royall person."

It was signed by Thomas Egerton, [then Solicitor General], Ralph Rokeby [Master of the Court of Requests], Richard Kingsmill [Attorney of the Court of Wards and Liveries], and 92 others.

A similar document relating to the Inner Temple is dated November 3rd, 1584, and the like for Lyon's Inn on the following day.*
